AGNEW OF LOCHRYAN, CO. WIGTON.*

The Agnews of Lochryan, or, as it was formerly called, Croach, were cadets of the Agnews of Lochnaw, having branched off from that family about the year 1450.† Nisbet, speaking of Col. Agnew of Lochryan, mentions him as "lineally descended and representative of a lawful brother of the family of Lochnaw;" and it is to be noticed that the Lochryan family, in correspondence with the Agnews of Lochnaw, always styled themselves "cousins." The name "Croach," a Gaelic term signifying a stack-shaped hill, was changed by Col. Agnew to Lochryan, which name it still bears, being now, I believe, the residence of Sir William Thomas Francis Agnew-Wallace, Bart. The arms of the Agnews were, Argent, within a bordure gules, a chevron of the same, betwixt, in chief, two cinquefoils of the second, and, in base, a saltire couped az.

William Agnew of Croach, a son of Agnew of Lochnaw, who succeeded.....	1455.
Nevin Agnew of Croach, a son of William, named in.....	1499.
Nevin Agnew, in possession.....	1537.
Gilbert Agnew	1550.
Alexander Agnew	1575.
William Agnew	1620.

Alexander Agnew of Croach married Elizabeth, dau. of John Dunbar of Mochrum (and aunt of Sir James Dunbar, 1st Baronet of Mochrum), grandson of Alexander Dunbar, by Grisel, dau. and heiress of Sir John Dunbar of Mochrum‡ and had issue.

(1st) dau. of Sir James Agnew, Bart., of Lochnaw, by Lady Mary Montgomerie, dau. of the 3rd Earl of Eglinton.

Andrew Agnew of Lochryan, Colonel of the Scots Greys, married to his first wife in 1700, died about 1730.

(2nd) Agnes, dau. of Sir Thomas Kennedy of Dunure and sister of the Right Hon. Thomas Kennedy, a Baron of Exchequer.

Helen Agnew married after 1684-5.

John Shaw of Ballytweedy, co. Antrim. High Sheriff for that county in 1660. Will dated 11 Jan. 1728-9, in which he mentions "Colonell Andrew Agnew of Loaghrayen in North Britain," and "Helen Agnew alias Shaw my dear Wife and Sister to said Colonel Agnew." Died 1729.

Thomas Agnew of Lochryan succeeded his father in 1730 and died unmarried in 1736.

Eleanor Agnew succeeded her half brother.

Sir Thomas Wallace, Bart., of Craigie, died about 1760.

Now represented by John Hart, Esq., Barrister-at-law, of Ballymacarron House, co. Down, Thomas Potter Miller, Esq., of Ardview, co. Down, and others.

Now represented by Sir William Thomas Francis Agnew-Wallace, Bart., late Lieut.-Col. Grenadier Guards. Burke's 'Peerage and Baronetage.'

FITZ HERBERT.—Any "Notes" of this name, however spelt, from parish and diocesan registers, monumental inscriptions, wills, private deeds, unindexed Rolls in Record Office, Municipal and University Records, pedigrees, printed or MS., and books, especially those privately printed, will be thankfully received. Reference to Harl. MSS. and standard topographical works not required.

† In Playfair's 'Baronetage,' p. 145, it is stated that Nevin Agnew of Lochnaw, living temp. James II., had issue—(1.) Quinton, his heir; and (2.) Nevin, who got a charter under the Great Seal from King James IV. of the lands of Lady Croft, etc., dated 1493. He was progenitor of the Agnews of Creoch. Are Creoch and Croach the same, or two different places?

Kyme.—In searching the Registers of Trowbridge, Wilts, the following entries were sent me incorrectly for King, viz. :—

Baptisms.

Nov. 25, 1703.	John, son of Loutherwick Kyme & Susannah his wife.
Dec. 1, 1706.	Thomas, son of Leonard Kyme and Mary his wife.
Mar. 7, 1709.	Stephen, son of Leonard Kyme and Mary his wife.
Mar. 11, 1709.	Anne, daughter of Lodowick Kyme and Eliza his wife.

These Christian names suggest an ancient lineage. Are they the descendants of Philip de Kyme, who was at the siege of Carlaverock, and whose arms were,—Gules, semée of crosses crosslet, a chevron or?

Watlington, Norfolk. W. L. King.

Manby.—I should be greatly obliged by information upon the following question, or any particulars respecting the earliest history of the ancient family of Manby. None of the pedigrees in the Harl. MSS. commence earlier than Hen. III., and only one alludes to Will. de Manby, 13 Hen. II., Pipe Roll, though the family is thought to be descended from Le Seigneur d'Estoteville, "a Norman baron of great renown," who either came in ten years before the Conquest with Hugh de Gournay or with the Conqueror. D'Estoteville's name is said to have been "de Mandeby," and he was surnamed "Frondebœuf," "Grandebœuf," or by Norman Historians "Grandbois." The tradition in our time is that we were originally located at Hunmanby in Yorkshire (anciently called Hundemandeby), whence this branch came to Knaresborough. The name of Estoteville figures on the earliest pages of the Hunmanby Registers, commencing about A.D. 1588. Can any one furnish me with the link connecting Estoteville (or Stuteville) with Manby, or inform me from what source information on the subject might be gathered?

* James Serces published 'Traité sur les Miracles: dans lequel on prouve que le Diable n'en sauroit faire pour confirmer l'erreur,' etc., etc. (Amsterdam, 1729, 8vo), and 'Popery an Enemy to Scripture; or, An Account of the several methods pursued by the Church of Rome to Sink the Authority of the Holy Scriptures' (London, 1736, 8vo). From his MS. French sermons, still in the possession of one of his descendants, the dates of which range from 1739 to 1761, he appears to have preached not only in the French Chapel Royal (suppressed in 1830), but, also, occasionally in the Chapels in Berwick Street, Castle Street, Leicester Fields, Spring Gardens, etc. In his will (175, St. Eloy) dated May 1760, and proved in April 1762, he appoints Executors, his wife Elizabeth, and daughter Katherine Lætitia, and Mr. John Robert Le Cointe, Jeweller, leaving the latter "for his obliging services" £10, to the French Hospital called La Providence £10 10s., and to Dr. John Louis Petit, "as a token of my esteem and affection, my ring mounted with an oriental sapphire." He was "nearly related," says the 'Gent.'s Mag.' for 1850 (p. 91), to the Rev. William Fraigneau, Regius Professor of Greek in the University of Cambridge in 1744–50, who appears to have become Vicar conjointly of Battersea and Beckenham, and to have died at Brighthelmston in Sept. 1778.

† Mr. Petit's principal work, 'Architectural Studies in France,' appeared in 1854. He published besides, in 1841, 'Remarks on Church Architecture," with illustrations, 2 vols. 8vo.; in 1846, 'Remarks on Architectural Character,' fol., and 'Remarks on the Principles of Gothic Architecture as applied to ordinary Parish Churches,' 8vo; in 1848, 'The Abbey Church of Tewkesbury,' 8vo; in 1854, 'A Lecture on Architectural Principles;' and was a large contributor to the pages of the 'British Archæological Journal.' Also, in 1869, appeared 'The Lesser and the Greater Light' (a poem), by the late J. L. P., edited by his Sister, with portrait, 8vo.

JAMES RUSSELL.

James Russell, formerly of Bescot Hall, in the Borough of Walsall, Staffordshire, and afterwards of Endwood Court, in the parish of Handsworth, in the same county, Esq., to whom was made the Grant of Arms given herewith, was the son of Thomas Russell, of Wednesbury, by his wife Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Robins, and was born at Wednesbury on the 13th July 1774, and baptized there. On the 10th October 1800, he married Sarah, elder daughter and coheir of the Rev. John Best, M.A., sometime Fellow of Worcester Coll., Oxford ; Incumbent of Bilston, co. Stafford, 16th April, 1778 ; Vicar of Sedgeley in the same county, 12th October, 1779 ; and Sub-Dean and Prebendary of Wolverhampton, 1st January 1780, by his wife Sarah, only daughter and (on the death of her brother) sole heir of Blois de Blois, formerly of Lyons, and afterwards of the City of London. The Bests are an ancient family long settled in the counties of Worcester and Stafford, and the Records of the family at the Heralds' College date back to the Rev. Edward Best, Clerk, M.A., Rector of Elmley Lovet, in the former county, to which he was presented on the 7th December 1620, by King James I., and the family is somewhat remarkable for the number of its sons who, from time to time, entered the "Sacred Ministry of the Church."

Mr. Russell died at Endwood Court (which he had built) on the 12th January 1849, and was buried in the churchyard of that parish. He left a family of five children, viz. :—John James, Thomas Henry, Sarah (married to the Rev. Francis Forman, Clerk, B.A.), Jane (married to Colonel Fletcher, M.A., F.R.S., of Lawneswood House, in the parish of Kinsgwinford, co. Worcester, in the Commission of the Peace and a Deputy Lieutenant for both counties, Worcester and Stafford, and a Barrister-at-Law of the Inner Temple), and Emma de Blois (married to George Hay Donaldson). Mrs. Russell had died a few years before her husband.

His eldest son, John James Russell, married Elizabeth, daughter of Joseph Smith, Esq., and died on the 26th of April 1872, leaving an only surviving child, Mary Elizabeth, the wife of Bartholomew Charles Gidley, M.A., Town Clerk of Exeter.

BARTHOLOMEW GIDLEY.

Bartholomew Gidley of Gidley, in the county of Devon, Esquire, Captain of the Stannaries of Chagford, and one of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the same county, was the eldest son of Bartholomew Gidley of Winkleigh, Devon, and Thamasine his wife, and was born in 1611, probably at the house of his uncle, George Gidley of Newhayes, in the parish of St. Thomas the Apostle, near Exeter, for he was baptized on the 23rd February, 1611-12, in the neighbouring parish church of Alphington. He matriculated 21st June, 1633, at Exeter Coll., Oxford, but appears to have left the University without taking his degree; on the 18th June, 1634, he was called to the Bar by the Honorable Society of the Middle Temple,* and on the 27th November, 1637, was married, at Alphington church, to Joane, the daughter of Robert Northleigh, of Northleigh, co. Devon, and of Peamore, near Exeter. In the Great Rebellion he was true to his King, and raised a troop in Gidley, Chagford, and Moretonhampstead, with whom he saw active service "at Plymouth, Lyme, and other places." At the General Quarter Sessions of the Peace for the County of Devon, Midsummer, 1643, held at Topsham (by adjournment from Tiverton, on account of the approach of the Rebel army), one John Gove, who had been bound over, was excused "because oath was made that hee is in service in the King's Army, under the command of Captayne Gidley."

After the Restoration, Mr. Gidley was placed in the Commission of the Peace for his native county, and from the frequent mention of his name in the county Records, appears to have been an active magistrate; and as some recognition of his services a Grant of Arms was made to him and his brother John Gidley, jointly. This grant dated 24th November, 1666, and an exemplification dated in 1672 of the Arms and Crest of John Gidley, are carefully preserved by Mr. Gustavus

Gidley of Plymouth ; a similar exemplification, of the same date, of the Arms and Crest of Bartholomew Gidley are in the possession of the Reverend Lewis Gidley, M.A., of Salisbury—both lineal descendants of John Gidley the co-grantee. Bartholomew Gidley's services are further recorded on a large silver medal, $2\frac{3}{4}$ inches in diameter, in the possession of the Reverend L. Gidley, bearing, on one side, the Arms in bold relief, and on the reverse the following inscription :—

The inscription is given in Lysons's Mag. Brit., p. clxxviii., and the medal itself is figured in Pinkerton's Medallic History of England, in which latter work are also figured a brass medallion portrait of John Gidley, and a silver token with his name, Arms, and date of birth.

Bartholomew Gidley was lord of the manors of Gidley and Hollacombe Paramore, co. Devon, and patron of the living of Gidley. He had no issue, and by deed, dated 24th February, 35 Charles II. (A.D. 1683), settled his estates upon his nephew Bartholomew, eldest son of his brother John. He built a small additional "Ile or Pew" on the south side of Winkleigh church, under faculty from Bishop Anthony Sparrow. He died 21, and was buried 26 January, 1685-6 at Winkleigh. His will, dated 28 November, 1683, was proved in the Principal Registry of the Lord Bishop of Exeter on the 5th October, 1686, by his relict and sole executrix. He was buried in Winkleigh church, where his monument bears the following inscription :—

His widow, Mrs. Joane Gidley, soon followed him to the same quiet resting-place. "She changed this life y^e 4^th^ of Jan^y^, 1699, in y^e 82^nd^ year of her age, as full of good works as years."

"Rest in peace her Urn and Shade,

Arms : Gidley, Impaling Arg. a chevron sa. betw. 3 roses gu.—(Northleigh).

John Gidley, the co-grantee of the Arms, was the 9th child. He was born 16 May, and bapt. 3rd June, 1632, at Winkleigh; matriculated at Exeter Coll., Oxford, 17th March, 1653-4; M.A. 21 June, 1660. Examples of the medallion portrait mentioned above, and of the silver token with the legend "John Gidley of London, Chirurgeon," are in the possession of his lineal descendant, Mr. Bartholomew Charles Gidley, M.A., town clerk of Exeter. John Gidley, who, as we have seen, described himself as of "London, chirurgeon," probably held some appointment at Court, for his grandson Bartholomew, who was born in 1689, had the King (William III.) for his godfather, and there is extant, in the possession of a descendant, a letter from the "Gossip" to his godson, containing some excellent advice. John Gidley had two sons, Bartholomew and John, and a daughter Rebecca. Bartholomew (a fine three-quarter portrait of whom, by Sir Peter Lely, is in the possession of the Reverend Lewis Gidley) died young, in 1702 (æ. 34), leaving a widow and eight children, and was buried in Winkleigh church. His father would appear, from the language of his will, to have resided principally in London, and occasionally at Winkleigh. He was at Winkleigh when he made his will on the 21st September, 1712, whereby he gave to his second son John and his daughter Rebecca, after the death of his wife, "All my goods which I left at my house in London when I last came from thence; that is to say, all my silver plate then there, all my tapestry and other hangings for eleaven rooms and eight closetts there, all my bedding," etc., etc. The date of his death is not known, nor can it be ascertained where he died, or where he was buried. Probably he had returned to his "house in London." His will was proved in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury on the 24th April, 1713, but the documents connected with the Grant throw no light on the question as to his place of residence. His grandson Bartholomew, of whom mention has been made above, lived at Gidley, where he was buried on the 21st March, 1776, aged 87. Mr. Gustavus Gidley of Plymouth is his direct descendant. This Bartholomew also had a younger brother John, who married Margaret, only child and heiress of Robert Ellicombe of Kenn, co. Devon, by Theodosia his wife, daughter of the Reverend John Mauduit, B.D., sometime Fellow of Exeter Coll., Oxford, and Senior Proctor, brother of Isaac Mauduit, successively Sheriff and Mayor of Exeter. His direct descendants are the Reverend Lewis Gidley of Salisbury, Mr. Bartholomew Charles Gidley of Exeter, and Mr. Bartholomew Courtenay Gidley of Lee, co. Kent, representatives of three families.

A MEMOIR OF CAPTAIN JOHN HARINGTON, OF CORSTON AND KELSTON, SOMERSET, M.P. FOR SOMERSET 1654, M.P. FOR BATH CITY 1658,*

Who died Anno Dom. 1700.

In consequence of the settlement of Kelston House and Estate upon the Hon. Lady Harington for life, at the time of her marriage (a settlement further confirmed to her by the will of her husband), Captain Harington, the eldest son of the Parliamentarian, and subject of our present memoir, was compelled to reside elsewhere.

* The Records of Bath City (to which I have been most courteously allowed access, and which I have carefully searched on the point of Parliamentary Representation from 1640—1660) shew that Mr. James Ash, Recorder, and Mr. John Harington were chosen at the Council Meeting, 7th January, 1658, "Citizens to serve for the City in the next Parliament to be holden the xxvij Day of this Instant January." Now, as to James Ash, he had sat for Bath in the Long Parliament, taking the place, in 1645, of William Bassett, "disabled by this Parliament." He had also been chosen for Bath in 1656, in the place of Col. Alexander Popham, who now changed Bath for the County. I find no trace upon these Records that the Harington of our present memoir (born 1627) was ever elected for Bath in the life-time of his father, as stated, with amusing circumstances, in "Nugæ Antiquæ," Vol. ii. (Edit. 1769), pp. 250-2. Nor is the name of "Horner" for Bath anywhere discernible. In fact the Borough seems to have gone short with one Member down to 1658. Has the compiler of the "Nugæ" confounded the representation of the City with that of the Shire? It would seem so.—F. J. P.

Now the manor of Corston had been recently purchased by the Haringtons; so for the first time in the annals of the family, the heir took up his residence in the manor-house of Corston, instead of at Kelston. The village of Corston, adjoining Newton-St.-Loe, stands opposite to Kelston, across the river Avon. There was no bridge between these villages, but, perhaps a boat was kept by those who were interested in crossing; or, in the days of which we are writing, the river may have been fordable. If so, the severance between them would not be so great as it is at present. However, the associations of Harington with Corston having once commenced, were not interrupted for several generations, and that, in the elder line of the family. In fact, both lines of the family broke up from their respective seats at Corston and Kelston about the same time, viz., in the middle of the eighteenth century.

It is not considered that the Dowager Lady Harington kept very close residence at Kelston, but lived chiefly in Bath and London, although she excluded her son John from occupation of the property. Tradition says, that she suffered considerable deterioration and waste to occur (as only having a life interest), and, by so doing, contributed in no small degree to the ultimate loss of the estate in the next century; the succeeding heirs never overtook the arrears of dilapidation which had been once created. Her ladyship's long life (her first child was born in 1624, and she lived to 1674), led to a correspondingly long exclusion of the heir from his inheritance, and, as might reasonably be expected, Captain Harington had long become a family man, and many children had been registered to him at Corston before he re-crossed the river to his true home at Kelston. This John Harrington, if we wanted a distinctive appellation for him, other than that of "Captain," might fairly be designated "The Patriarch," for he was four times married;* had issue by all his wives, and more by the last than by either of the others, and in the end of his days was represented by twenty children, and more grandchildren than his biographer has time to count. Indeed he may be truthfully said to have done more than any other John Harington to strike terror into the heart of Genealogists, and deter them from attempting a full Harington pedigree.

Having said this much on the extensive labour of a Harington genealogical history, may the present writer upon Harington be here allowed to acknowledge, that had it not been for very special privileges accorded to him by members of the family in giving him full access to their Papers and Records, and for the valuable aid he has received from the Rev. Frederick Brown, F.S.A., Colonel J. Lemuel Chester, LL.D., and other members of the Harleian Society, he could never have achieved the measure of success (whatever it may be), to which he has attained. And may he claim for himself, at this point of Harington-History in Somerset (when he and his readers are face to face with Captain Harington, his twenty children and their descendants), a modified censure and criticism, should he be found by some penetrating eyes to have unfortunately omitted a Harington or two in the family enumeration.

But to return from a personal digression, and resume the thread of the narrative. The dictatorial temper, or, shall we say, the estate-retaining policy, of Lady Dyoness Harington was not the only trial which Captain Harington had to endure in early life; for in May, of the year 1660, he very narrowly escaped the fate of having his

* His first wife was Mary, daughter and coheir of Peter Specott, Esq., of Thornbury, co. Devon. Her pedigree shall be given presently.

Second wife, Ann, daughter of Sir John Horner, of Mells, co. Somerset. Her pedigree shall also appear.

Third wife, Alice, whose surname stands both as Snow and Stowe in the Harington family memoranda, and whose family connections have baffled hitherto all attempt to discover them.[1]

Fourth wife and last, Helena, daughter of Benjamin Gostlett, Esq., of Marshfield, co. Glouc., whose family connection has been already shewn in a table, Vol. III., page 437.

[1] N.B.—Any clergyman would confer a great genealogical boon if he could discover the marriage entry of John and Alice (probably Snow) Harington, from his register, and send it to 'Miscellanea Genealogica et Heraldica.' The marriage probably took place in Gloucestershire or Wilts, and in 1663 or 1664.

estates confiscated, and being himself excepted out of the general pardon by Charles II. He had accepted a commission as a Captain of Horse from the Protector in 1655, and from the Council of State as a Captain of Foot in April 1660. His father, too, had been noted for his Republican proclivities, and had interviewed Charles I. at Carisbrook Castle, as a Commissioner of the Parliament. It is quite evident that Captain Harington was now in a difficult position, and running great risk of entire ruin. However, thanks to an earnest representation made by Lord Powlett and other influential noblemen and gentlemen of the West of England* as to his "case" being a "hard" one, the Captain was ultimately spared and received full pardon from the Crown.

After drawing out thus narrowly from political jeopardy, through the kind exertions of his country friends, Harington settled down entirely to peaceful pursuits, attending to his duties as a magistrate of the county, and taking care of his own affairs and family. In Nov. 1660, he assisted to disband Col. Oswald's regiment of horse, paying them off at Bath. During the prevalence of secular marriage before Justices of the Peace, Harington had presided at many such marriages (see foot note for two instances†), and his influence extended so far as Frome Selwood, where an entry in the Register Book, Sep. 1653, records his appointing the Civil Registrar there, John Debnam.

Although, for distinction sake, we keep up in this memoir the title of Captain, applied to Harington, derived from his position in Oliver's forces, yet he appears to have dropped it with the year 1660 (no doubt wisely), and was henceforth commonly known as John Harington, Esq.

He was a man of warm heart, and charitable, genial disposition, or we think he would never have attracted to himself the support of such numerous and earnest friends as he had in the critical juncture of his affairs. He removed to Kelston in 1674 or 5, and married his fourth wife there in 1678. As he lived, so he died, always in kindly thoughtfulness of others. He was a contributor to Bath Abbey library, and a benefactor of many parishes. For, in spite of his overwhelming calls to take care of "his own," he, nevertheless, made bequests to Kelston and to Marshfield. Nor did he forget the parish of Weston, but endowed the vicar of that place with the rents and profits of the alienated rectory which had long been received by the Haringtons. This kind act was subsequently testified to by Wm. Cheyne, Rector of Weston, to Dr. Henry Harington, M.D., of Bath, by a letter dated August 9th, 1759, as follows :—

"At my first coming to this place there was a very plain inscription on the wall of the Chancel, relating to your Grandfather's Benefaction, which was afterwards destroyed to put up a monument; wherefore I thought it incumbent on me in some proper manner to perpetuate that obligation, and I erected a small tablet of marble with the following inscription: 'In memory of the pious Benefaction of John Harington, of Kelston, Esq., who made a free and perpetual donation of the Rectory to the Minister [Vicar], Anno Domini 1699, on condition that he resided.

"I am, Sir, etc.

"[Signed] Wm. Cheyne."

* Their names and position shall be given in a following article.

† 1.—The first is taken from the parish Register of Freshford, and is the record of a double wedding of most oddly-named persons, in 1655–6.

"The contract of matrimonie between John Allen and Mary Thick; and betweene Robert Moone and Mary Twinne was published Feb. 22nd and 29th, and on May 7th, at the Market Crosse in Philip's Norton, by Thos. Allen, Register (sic) of Freshford; and the parties aforesaid were married by John Harington, Esq., Justice of the Peace for the County of Somerset."

2.—The second, from the Register of North Stoke, co. Somerset, where it will be seen that the Parson and Squire fairly changed places according to our present received opinions, Saul, so to say offering sacrifice in lieu of Samuel, at the altar of Hymen. The names of the couples are without significance, but the marriage referred to took place 14th April 1656, and is entered as "solemnized" by John Harington, Esq., and "witnessed,' as to the contract by Robert Latimer, Clerk.

Flemings in Norfolk, temp. Ed. III., p. 6.—I fear Mr. Gallard will not find any list of these settlers. He might look at Add. MSS., Brit. Mus., 2549, fo. 318, which gives names of foreigners in Norfolk in the fifteenth century, to see if any Flemish-sounding names were then still extant, and also refer to Petitions to Parliament, Nos. 6160 and 7338 (Public Record Office), which refer to Flemish merchants in Norwich and Yarmouth, to an Inquisition as to the goods and chattels of alien merchants in the Queen's Remembrancer of the Exchequer ($\frac{3}{12}$), and to Norfolk Subsidy Roll, 22 Edw. IV. $\frac{149}{177}$.

If he is interested in the second settlement, in the time of the Tudors, I can tell him, probably, all he wants to know if he will communicate with me.

Windyer or Wyndyer.—Is this name of Welsh origin? Are there any Arms attributed to this family? Any information relative to the family will be acceptable. The only instances in which I have come across the name are in the appointments in the 'Naval Chronicle,' Walter Wyndyer, Lieut. 1814, who I believe is my father's (Commander Walter Wyndyer Morris) godfather; and in a Cape of Good Hope newspaper, in relation to the appointment of Sir Hercules Robinson, a Mr. Justice Wyndeyer is spoken of.—G. E. Windyer Morris.

The family of Richards settled at Patcholl, in Kentisbury, circa 1420 ; and the house there, which is still in the family, was rebuilt in the year 1613. The family, according to tradition, were descended from Edward Richards, Barrister-at-Law of the Middle Temple, who came from the neighbourhood of Ashburton ; by his marriage with Eleanor, daughter and heiress of John Avenell, of Loxbere, Devon, Esquire, Edward Richards seems to have taken the arms of Avenell. He died in 1514. Lysons in his Magna Britannia says,—"The Manor of Kentisbury belonged to the ancient family of Lupus, or Wolf. In the reign of Queen Elizabeth the co-heiresses married Long and Randall ; Mrs. Long died without issue. Richard Richards (of Patcholl), who died 1632, purchased the Manor and Barton with advowson of Humphry Randall. Three of the Richards's family were successfully Rectors of Kentisbury ; the last held the Rectory fifty-two years, and died in 1761. He rebuilt the Parsonage House." The family intermarried into that of Randall, in the persons of that of Francis Richards and Rithord Randall in 1676.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS IN BATH.

Anthony à Wood, the celebrated Oxford antiquary, visited Bath on two occasions, first in 1676, and the second time in 1678.

In 1676 he took copies of the inscriptions in the Churches of that city. Many of these inscriptions will be found in Dr. Rawlinson's 'History of the Cathedral Church of Salisbury and the Abbey Church of Bath' (8vo, 1723), but this volume being extremely scarce, I prefer to give the whole number as a literal copy made by me from Wood's MS., now in the Bodleian Library, and formerly in the Ashmolean Museum (No. 8517, Huddesford's Catalogue, 1761).

Those inscriptions printed by Rawlinson I have marked with an asterisk, and those in the Abbey Church not so marked appear to have either been removed in the intervening space of time, or otherwise to have escaped Dr. Rawlinson's observation. I may add that Wood's MS. has never before been printed.

THE POLITICAL JEOPARDY OF JOHN HARINGTON, ESQ., IN 1660; AND BY WHAT FRIENDS HE WAS RESCUED FROM IT.

The affair is opened by a letter from Hyde (Baron Hyde, Nov. 1660, afterwards Earl of Clarendon), requiring Lord Poulett to render a true and particular account of the members of any rebellious families in Somerset, who had been employed in civil or military offices under the Usurper, and he points in particular to John Harington as having borne arms by Commission in 1655, and as being the son of one who had gone as a Commissioner of the Parliament to the late King at Carisbrook Castle. He intimates that in spite of the King's general clemency, some examples of offenders must be made in "justice to the Royal blood and family, and to an injured nation," etc. (For the letter in full, see 'Nugæ Antiquæ of Harington,' vol. iii., pp. 1-3, Edit. 1779.)

In consequence of this letter a 'Certificate' in favour of John Harington was drawn up and signed by many noblemen and gentlemen of county position, exonerating him from disloyalty, and explaining the reasons of his conduct. The certificate was then forwarded to Hyde, accompanied by a letter from the Earl Poulett, excusing the county in general from the accusations brought against it, and speaking in the highest terms of Harington, and the family from which he descended. (See 'Nugæ,' as above cited, pp. 4, 5.)

"He did bear Commission from Oliver Cromwell, but at our request to protect us from ruin and plunder .... His compliance rendered him exposed to loss of friends and relations in battle, and loss of fortune in many acts of goodness. This County is under great obligations to this gentleman, and our duty obliges us to render him our best services to protect him from his Majestie's displeasure," etc.

The terms of the Certificate were to this effect:—

It admits that Harington did receive a Commission for a County-troop of Horse under Oliver, but that he would have refused it had he not been entreated to accept it for the safety of Bath, and good of the county of Somerset; that after its acceptance he performed his duties with hazard to himself, and at great expense. At "his own cost discharging and relieving with money and necessaries Divers who had otherwise layne long in restraint, and that he had since shewn himself most readie and affectionate to his Majesty's service."

The names attached to this Certificate are:—

(1.) Poulett, (2.) Marleburgh, (3.) Th° Bridges, (4.) George Norton, (5.) John Pearce, (6.) Christopher Dillon, (7.) John Newton, (8.) Maurice Berkeley, (9.) William Basset, (10.) E. Phelipps, (11.) Geo. Clarke, (12.) G. Speke, (13.) John Bampfield, (14.) Sam. Horner, (15.) Thomas Hall, (16.) Wm Hall, (17.) Henry Nevile, (18.) John Graham, (19.) Sam. Gorges, (20.) Hugh Smyth, (21.) Will. Helyar, (22.) George Sydenham, (23.) Thomas Pigott, (24.) A. Poulett.

This intervention on Harington's behalf succeeded. And after receiving his Majesty's most gracious pardon, the Certificate came into his own possession, and is now among the papers of his family. It bears the following foot-note in Harington's hand :—

"To the above Certificate I am indebted for my life and fortune, which otherwise had been forfeited by the Laws of the Land, and hereby I obtained his Majesty's most gracious Pardon under the Seal of England; having engaged in arms on the Parliament's behalf, at the earnest desire of my friends, to save the Countie of Somerset, as much as my endeavours would admit, from Spoil and Rapine.

"Praised be God,

"Corston, June 30, 1667. "JOHN HARINGTON."

DUGDALE'S BARONAGE.—In searching through the genealogical MSS. of a nobleman whose ancestor was a great genealogist, I found an extremely clearly written MS. Index to both volumes of Dugdale's 'Baronage,' which I have tested, and find very accurate. I do not know whether the Index Society have this book in hand; but, if not, it would surely be worth printing. If the Harleian or some other Society would take it up, I have ascertained that permission would be given for the purpose.

* Cf. 'Westminster Abbey Registers' (being the publication of the Harleian Society for 1875), edited by Colonel Chester, to whose untiring kindness the Compiler is again indebted for much information.

† The above arms, which have been used by this family for four generations, or upwards of 150 years, are those of Smith of Withcote, or De Heriz, and two brothers, also named Samuel and Hugh, undoubtedly of the later family, are found to have flourished contemporaneously with the Samuel and Hugh above named. Information corroborative (or otherwise) of this connection would be welcomed. It is supposed, from the evidence of some family plate, dating between 1675 and 1696, which bears the initials E. S., that the father of the first Samuel was either Edward or Erasmus Smith.

‡ The gravestone, of black marble, laid probably in 1789 in the North aisle of the nave, had been, with nearly all the other gravestones in that part of the Abbey, removed in 1835, when the nave was wholly repaved, as it now appears. The original site of the stone being known to an inch, it was, with permission of the Dean, after the lettering had been recut, replaced by the Compiler of this pedigree in 1874.

COLYEAR, ALIAS ROBERTSON, EARL OF PORTMORE.

It is stated in various accounts of this family that they descended from the Robertsons of Strowan, in Perthshire, and assumed the surname of Colyear. The change of names had previously been made from Colyear to Robertson.

The late Colonel James Robertson, in his "Comitatus de Atholia," suggested that Sir Alexander Robertson, first baronet, might have been son of Patrick Robertson of Dulcaben, in the parish of Dowally, living in 1649, but there is proof that he was son of Major David Colyear. The author of "The History and Martial Atchievements of the Robertsons of Strowan" says that "Sir Alexander, for reasons, assumed the surname of Collier, and after designed himself Sir Alexander Robertson, alias Collier. Sir David, his son, not chusing two names, adheared to Collier." No arms or pedigree are registered. Porteus, Snowdon Herald, 1661, gives, in his armorial MS., Coalyer, sable, a cross patée fitchée or; no crest; motto, Nihilo nisi crucem.

A funeral entry of Sir Thomas Nicolson of Tillicoultrie, who died in Edinburgh 2d Jan. 1699, and was interred on the 4th in the Greyfriars Churchyard, gives these as the arms of his mother, Martha Coalzier, and supplies the alliances of her family for two generations :—

I. —— Coalzier, married —— Hay, dau. of a second son of the Earl of Erroll. Arms: argent, three inescutcheons gules, a crescent of the last in the centre for difference.

II. Colonel Walter Coalzier (the complimentary style "of that Ilk" is added) commanded a Scots Regiment in the service of the States General. He married one of the ten daughters of Sir Alexander Bruce, of Airth, co. Stirling, by Margaret, daughter of Alexander Lord Elphinstone, sister of Major Alexander Bruce, last of Airth, an officer in the service of the States General, who married Anna Vanneck, of Guelderland, and died in Sept. 1665.

Their daughter,

III. Martha Coalzier (called Sabina in 'Burke's Peerage'), married Sir John Nicolson, of Tillicoultrie.

There can be little doubt that the first of the Portmore family, who has been traced as yet—

I. Major David Colzear, was a relative of these Coalyiers. He had issue :— Alexander, Joanna, who was dead, unmarried 24 March 1677, when her brother, then designed Colonel Alexander Robertson, alias Colzear, was served heir general to her.

II. Sir Alexander Robertson, alias Colyear, of the Province of Holland, was created a baronet of England, 24 Feb. 1676; he was father of David, Earl of Portmore, and of Walter Philip Colyear, General in the service of the States General, who left an only child, Elizabeth, wife of Lionel, Duke of Dorset, represented by Earl Delawarr.

III. Sir David Colyear, second baronet, came to England after the Revolution, 1688, was naturalized in 1697 by Act of Parliament as Sir David Collier; he was created Baron Portmore and Blackness in the Peerage of Scotland, 1 June 1699, as General Sir David Colyear, and in the patent is stated e familiâ illustri et honorabili rectâ lineâ prosapiam suam ducere, but nothing is said of the Robertsons. Lord Portmore was raised to an Earldom 1703, was General 1711, Knight of the Thistle 1713, Governor of Gibraltar 1706, and commanded the Forces in Scotland.

He married Catherine Sidley, Countess of Dorchester in her own right, and died in 1730, leaving issue. The Portmore estate, in the county of Peebles, was sold in 1798, and the Earldom and minor titles became extinct in 1835. Lord Scarsdale, the Hon. George S. G. Douglas Pennant, and the Dowager Lady Sudeley, are coheirs of line. The arms borne by the ennobled family have no resemblance to those allowed to Lady Nicolson; they were, Gules, on a chevron between three wolves' heads erased argent as many oak trees eradicated proper, fructed or; crest, a unicorn salient argent armed and maned or; motto, Avance; supporters, two wolves proper.

The wolves' heads are the bearing of the name of Robertson; the crest, as it first appeared to me, might be allusive to the supporters of the Royal arms of Scotland, and of the nature of an augmentation, but perhaps it is borrowed from or founded on the bearings of other families whose surnames resemble Colyear. Robert Collier of Darlaston, co. Stafford, whose ancestor is said to have come from France in the reign of Henry VI., had a grant of arms in the first year of Queen Elizabeth's reign, Argent, on a chevron azure between three demi unicorns courant gules as many acorn slips or. To his heir, Francis Collier of Darlaston, 10 Oct. 1629, Sir William Segar, Garter, granted the coat already quoted from Porteus's MS.; crest, a cross patée fitchée between two wings conjoined or. The Collyers of Hackford, in Norfolk, said to descend from a refugee from Picardy, who came over in the reign of Elizabeth, bear unicorns' heads; the arms entered in the "Armorial Général de France," by the Collert of Tournay are, Sable, the head and neck of a unicorn in profile argent.

The surname of Collier, Coallier, Colyeir, Coilyear, Colyeare, etc., occurs in Fifeshire during the sixteenth, seventeenth, and eighteenth centuries, and is probably taken from an occupation. Andrew Coilyear had a charter of a tenement, etc., in Kirkaldy from the Commendator of Dunfermline, circa 1560.

William Colyeare, a little later, held the lands of Pendony. John Coilzear, of Lochgelly, was dead before Jan. 1606, when his son John was served heir to him in the west half of Lochgelly. It is remarkable that in this as well as in the Portmore family an alias was used. John Strahendrie, alias Coalyeare, of Lochgelly, was succeeded in the same lands by his son, John Strahendrie, alias Coalyeare; service 18 Jan. 1661.

David Coallier, of Western Lochgelly, left a son John, who was served heir general, 29 July 1724, after which there is no further record. Strahendrie, or Strathendry, is within five miles of Lochgelly, and was anciently the property of a family who took their surnames from it. It is probable that Mr. John Collier, who graduated at the University of St. Andrews, 1650, was of the Lochgelly family. He was minister of the parish of Carrington, married twice, had issue, and died 1691.

Parker, Lord Macclesfield.—An elaborate pedigree of this family is given by Collins ('Peerage,' vol. iv., p. 190), which traces the first Lord Macclesfield from Thomas Parker of Bulwel, co. Derby, temp. Ric. II. Can any reliance be placed on this descent? Collins makes Thomas (father of the Chief Justice) son of William Parker of Parwich, who died in 1631, æt. 78, by Eliz., dau'r of Humfrey Wilson. In point of fact, he was second son of George Parker of Park Hall, co. Stafford, by Grace, dau'r of Hugh Bateman of Hartington, co. Derby. Does not this discrepancy invalidate the whole descent; and, if so, from what family was Lord Macclesfield descended? While exploring in Derbyshire, I came across an interesting monument of this family in the churchyard of Wirksworth, on a black marble slab, broken and lying neglected, thickly covered with dirt, formerly said to have been inside the church:—

Here lieth ye body of Anne Parker one of ye Daughters & coheires of Robert Venables of Nuneham in ye County of Chester Esq. widdow
& relict of Thomas Parker late of Minwich, second son of George Parker of parkhall in ye county of Stafford Esq. She dyed ye
27 day of June Anno Dom.
1699 in ye 61 yeare of her age.

This adds considerably to the information concerning this lady in the pedigrees of the family, to whom the existence of the monument is probably unknown. She was the mother of the first Lord Macclesfield.

John Parker.

* These arms are found on a monument to John and Joan Jackson, still extant in S. Anne's Church, although removed from the comparatively more conspicuous position it occupied within the Compiler's memory, and bear on an inescutcheon of pretence .... a lion passant (the tinctures obscured), for Taylor.

N.B.—The Compiler would be grateful for any information regarding these Jacksons. They were not impossibly related to the family of this name which is still flourishing in Jamaica, seeing that, as appears from an old Family Bible, a Mrs. Witter stood as sponsor conjointly with Mr. John Jackson, Senior, at the baptism of a grandson of the above Henry and Anna Godde (Witter Wagner, born 21 Feb. 1755, and died 13 Dec. 1758); while John Jackson, Attorney-General of Jamaica, is found to have married the only daughter of a Thomas Witter of Morton, co, Surrey, and Hanover, Jamaica (whose widow, Eleanor, née Hunter, married secondly Mr. Erskine Douglas, and left issue). If this inference is not borne out by fact, the coincidence is singular. They were also connected by ties of friendship, if not of relationship, with several Huguenot Refugee Families,—e.g. Sarah Jackson, in 1757, willed £20 to Mary, wife of Stephen Ponsanet, of Hayes Court; Rebecca Jackson in 1816 left small legacies of remembrance to Frances and Susanna Biou, the latter of whom, by her will, dated 29 May, 1819, and proved 1 Feb. 1821, left the Directors of the French Hospital of La Providence a bequest of £500; and in an old family Memorandum Book, now in the possession of a member of the Wright family, from which several of the above dates are derived, the death is recorded—as though this event were one of family interest—of "Mr. Peter Le Grand, taken ill at Middlesex Hospital on 23 Nov." 1770.

* It appeareth y^t^ at 3 severall times the ruins of this church of S. Peter have been und'taken to be repaired part after part, first, by the citie of Bathe, with a generall collection over all this Kingdome for seaven yeares in the time of the Queen (Elizabeth) by vertue of her Majesties letters patents, in which 7 yeares the upp' part thereof was all covered with the north part of the crose isle as it now standeth. The principall benefactor to the first was M^r^ Edmund Colthurst, Esqr., in whose possession this church then was, and gave it to the citie, though uncovered and much ruined, as it had long stood after the dissolution, yet the walls of the great tower and most part of the church was then standing. (See Sir Joh. Harington's "Brief View of the Ch. of Engl.," te'p. Jac. reg., or ye continuation of the Hist. of B'ps., p. 97, 98, &c.)

The 2d time the south part of the cross isle was raised neare from ye ground and covered as it is now, and the tower also lofted and leaded as now it is, with a clock set in it, and the bell to go as they both now doe. The principall benefactor to this work was Mr Tho. Bellot, Esqr., steward of the house, and one of the executors of Will. L. Burleigh, sometimes L'd Treasurer of England, part at his Ld's charge and the rest at his owne. Mr Bellot began this work in Q. Elizabeth's time and left it with his life, since K. James came to ye crowne.

The 3d time was repaired the 3d part of this church, yt from the tower westward. The principall benefactor to this was Ja'es Montague, D.D., then B'p of Bath and Wells, since B'p of Winchester, one of the L'ds of his majesties privie councell and prelate of the garter.

Of particular benefactors to the first work I find yet (beside Mr. Colthurst) but two, who were Thom. E. of Sussex, L'd Chamb'laine to ye Queen's Majestie, at whose charge was glased the upp'most of the high windowes on ye north side of the choire, and Walter Callcutt of Williamscote in com. Ox'on, gent., who gave ten pounds towards the glasing of windowes in the said first repaired part.

M'd yt Sr Will. Paston of Northfolk, Kt., and Mr Dan. Walters of the said countie, gent., were the first benefactors to the 2d work, an. 1604.

* Benefactors to ye 2d worke.

Thomas Bellot of Lond., Esq., gave at first towards the building up of the south isle £200.

Edw. Horton of Bath, Esq., gave in his life time £6 and by his will £50.

Will. Powell, before mentioned, gave the 2d time, 24 Sept. 1607, £7.

Rowland Backhouse of Lond., merchant and Ald'man, executor to Mr Barthelm. Barnes of the same citie, gave in behalf of the said Mr Barnes £12, etc., with many others yt gave smaller sums.

* The Bell in ye church wch was bought at Caynsham, and cost £80, was bought with a collection made from severall benefactors mostly living in Bath, and the suburbs thereof, towards wch the said Th. Bellot gave £30.

The window over the vestrie dore was set up by the Company of Taylors of this citie, and yt in the west side of the south cross isle was put up by Richard Beacon of this citie, Tyler, who did all the tiling work from the first to ye last upon this church. (In ye window he is written plasterer, and tis said there yt he set it up, an. 1606.)

The Galleries round the choire, font, ye partitions between the body of the church, and the choire, ye seats in ye said choire for noble men and men of worship, ladies and women of worshipfull sort, seats for the minister and clerk, etc., were done at ye charge of Th. Bellot before mentioned. Those seates on the south and north sides therof were done at ye cities charg' of £10. (The seats are without ye compass of the choire.)

The said Mr Tho. Bellott besides all this caused the great east window of the choire to be repaired with masons work, with smithes work, and to be all glased at his onlie charge of £60.

Benefactors to the 3d worke.

James Mountague, B'p of B. and Wells, gave £1000.

Will. L'd Compton, since E. of N'hampton, £40.

(These five windowes are the upp' windowes in the north side of y^e^ body and have had the ar'es of the benefactors in them.)

1. The Ladie Ann Countess Dowager of Dorset glased the first upp' window of the north side of the bodie of y^e^ church.

2. S^r^ Rob. Ritch, K^t^, glased the 2^d^ upp' window o' the north side.

3. S^r^ Franc. Seymour, K^t^, glased the middle of y^e^ upp' windowes.

FAMILIES OF HAMERTON AND ROUTH.—In the Registers of the Parish Church of Scarborough, co. York, appears the marriage of "John Hamerton of the parish of St. Mary in the city of Carlisle with Julia Routh of this parish," solemnized on the 14th May 1761. In his affidavit, on applying for a licence in the Consistory Court of York, dated 12th May 1761, John Hamerton certifies that he is of the age of twenty-five years and upwards, and a bachelor, and intends to marry Julia Routh of Scarborough, aged nineteen years and upwards; her mother, Mary Routh, a widow, appearing as a consenting party. The above John Hamerton claimed to belong to the ancient family of Hamerton of Hellifield Peel, co. York. Any information regarding him, the date and place of his birth, his parentage and immediate ancestry, would be much valued. In an old MS. pedigree he is described as "of Saddleworth, co. York," but his baptism is not registered there. His wife, Julia, was the daughter and eventually sole heir of John Routh of Scarborough, Esq., by Mary, only surviving daughter of Thos. Lewen of Amble, co. Northumberland, Esq., and one of her maternal relations, Francis Lewen, was one of the witnesses to her marriage. I should be glad of any information as to this family of Routh.

* Note on the Presentation made by John Specote, 1457, from the list of Institutions to St. Mabyn, Bp. Neville's Register, fo. 5 :—
1457, June 24th, Thomas Colles, B.L., Chaplain, admitted to the Parish Church of St. Mabyn, vacant by the death of John Wymond, the last rector, upon the presentation of John Speccotte, Esq., for this turn the true patron. 1457, June 24, Certificate : "Upon an inquisition to inquire into the vacancy and right of presentation to the church of St. Mabyn. The jurors present that the church is vacant by the death of John Wymond, the last rector, who died the 11th June in the year aforesaid; that John Speccote, Esq., is the true patron for this turn; it being remembered that King Henry V., deceased, last presented by reason of the minority of John Holbeine, son and heir of Johanna, dau'r of Robert Scobhyll, which said Johanna was the eldest dau'r of the said Robert Scobhyll, and that the aforesaid John Speccote, Esq., to whom the right of presentation for this turn belongs, is heir of Isabella Speccote, his mother, second dau'r of the said Robert Scobyll; and that Thomas Colles, who has been presented, is in every way fit." (Ibid., 71.)

† On 'Thornbury,' Risdon writes, "William, the last (of Cornutus family), left their lands unto Margaret, his cousin and next heir married into the family of Speccot Knights, who made their chief dwelling there. It is averred by some that the Specot's ancient name was Fitz Barnard, and that they took the name [Speccot] of the house so called. Sir Baldwin Specott, Knight, younger son of Sir Ric. Specott by Maude, one of the coheirs of Sir Baldwin Belston, relinquishing his own name, was called Belston after his mother," etc. (Risdon, p. 249.) The Thornbury Register, extant 1881, only dates from 1650, and there are no inscriptions nor tablets extant in any part of the church to the Specott family. Only Sir John Specott's tomb remains, without inscription, but surmounted by arms and effigy (see Lysons's 'Mag., Brit. Devon'). This Edmund Specott in his will, set out in his Inq. p.m., names Jane, his wife, and three dau'rs, Ibote, Mary, and Phileppe, and son and heir Humphrey, and no other children.

‡ It is to be observed that the Visit. Co. Devon, 1564, places a son Roger on this line, and omits Nicholas. Whereas that of 1620 gives Nicholas and Humphrey as here set down. The lines of both brothers are signed by their representatives of 1620. Relying on their true knowledge of the family, I omit Roger.—F. J. P.

§ "Mr. Rychard Coffyn & Mrs. Elyzabeth Lovyes were wedded on x June 1589." (Alwington, Devon, Par. Reg.) He died 25 July 1617, æt. 48; she died 3 May 1651, æt. 80. The names of eight sons and seven dau'rs are recorded on their monuments in Alwington Church. (Note given by Rev. J. Ingle Dredge; and for his further assistance on this Pedigree I am much indebted, as well as to Sir John Maclean.—F. J. P.)

I have some other notes of Speccotts in Exeter, but am unable to assign them their places in the Pedigree.—F. J. P.

F

* When Sir John Speccott of Penheale died in 1705, Thomas Long, heir male of Speccott's aunt Long, inherited Penheale. Sir John's will, made Aug. 19, 1703, proved Nov. 6, 1705, mentions "My aunt Mrs. Elizabeth Long."

2 sons.

(1) Honoria. = Charles Phillips of St. Teath.

(2) Elizab., ob. unmar.

(3) Margaret. = 1st h., Charles Davie of Orleigh, buried at Buckland Brewer Sept. 6, 1770.
= 2 h. John Bidlake Herring of Clobury, s.p.

The Longs of Penheale are said by Gilbert ('C. S.,' vol. ii., p. 189) to have been of Draycott in Wiltshire. Without going back further than the time of Paul Speccot (who died 1644), Penheale was vested in him. He had issue a son John and four daughters, of whom Elizabeth (I presume the eldest dau'r) married Thomas Long. Upon the extinction of this Specott male line by the death of Sir John Speccott in 1705, Thomas Long succeeded to Penheale. He died circa 1740, leaving three sons and as many daughters. The sons all died s.p., and the daughters became coheirs. Honor married Charles Phillips.(1) Elizabeth died unmarried. Margaret married, 1st, Mr. Charles Davie of Orleigh ; 2ndly, Major John Bidlake Herring.

(1) Charles Phillips was son of Mr. John Phillips of St. Teath, who settled at Camelford. Charles Phillips was appointed Recorder for that borough. Married to one of the coheirs of Long, as shewn above ; but dying s.p., he left his property to his brother William, rector of Lanteglos, who dying s.p., it devolved on a younger brother Jonathan. He was originally in the Navy, but became Recorder of Camelford. Having taken up the address of congratulation from the Borough upon the King's escape from the attack upon his life by Margaret Nicholson, he received the honour of knighthood. He died s.p., and is represented (1881) by John Carpenter-Garnier, Esq., of Mount Tavy, near Tavistock. (Cf. Maclean's 'Hist. of Trigg-Minor,' vol. ii., p. 364.)

PARKER (p. 72).—The pedigree in Collins's 'Peerage' is considered, I believe, to be questionable, and cannot be relied upon. George Parker of Park Hall, in Staffordshire, appeared at the Visitation of that county on the 2nd of April 1664, being then aged 71, and stated himself to be the son of William Parker of Parwich, co. Derby, by Elizabeth, dau'r of [Humphry] Wilson, and the grandson of George Parker, also of Parwich. Respite was given for proof of the arms borne, which were, Gules, a chevron between three leopards' heads or. Dugdale, Norroy, placed on the pedigree a memorandum that it being afterwards made evident to him that these Parkers were descended from Parker of Norton Lees, co. Derby, he allowed those arms to the above-named George Parker of Park Hall. The same recorded pedigree has a pencilled addition, stating that the grandfather of George Parker of Park Hall was the second son of John Parker of Norton Lees, by Elizabeth Eyre. Thomas Parker of Bulwell, temp. Rich. II., married Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Adam de Gotham of Norton Lees, and he was the great-grandfather of the above John who married Elizabeth Eyre. The first Earl of Macclesfield was a son of Thomas, and grandson of the before-mentioned George Parker of Park Hall, as stated in the monumental inscription at Wirksworth.

* It seems that this Catherine re-married John Tanner of Cornwall (Westcote is in error in ascribing a sister Catherine to Charles Speccot), with issue by him Katharine, Julian, and Elizabeth, baptized respectively Aug. 25, 1657; May 24, 1660; May 5, 1662. (Merton and Thornbury Registers.)

† Risdon says. p. 172, of this ancient and noted family, "Walter Reynell gave Malston to his younger son, and it is now the dwelling of that name" (circa 1630). This Walter Reynell was son of John Reynell of Malston and East Ogwell. great grandson of Sir Walter Reynell of co. Cambridge and co. Devon, who obtained Malston by marriage with Margaret Stighull, or Style (as see Burke's 'Commoners,' vol. iv., p. 447 (1838), and pp. 452-3, most important ped. and details of Reynell); and the "younger" son of this Walter (as styled by Risdon) was his second son Thomas, to whom his father left Malston, and from whom descend the branch of Reynells of Malston.

The tablet, after recounting his travels and scientific researches, adds "labore oppressus obiit Bathoniæ die octavo Februarii suæ ætatis vicesimo octavo MDCCXCVI."

* It may be that from this match the intimacy with the Longs commenced, which resulted in an alliance between Elizabeth Speccott and Thos. Long, and in Penheale, the estate of the Right Hon. Sir John Speccott, on his decease in 1705, passing to Thomas Long, Esq., Sheriff of Cornwall, 1724 (?).

† This Henry Gibbs was doubtless a descendant of Wm. Gibbes of Bedminster, who died 1603. (Vide Burke's 'Landed Gentry.')

ROSS (p. 53).—My mother was the granddaughter of George Ross who married Ann Lawler, a Scotch lady. There is but one male descendant living of the name, my first cousin, George Ross, whose only son was killed in the late Southern Rebellion. His sister, Miss Mary Ross, a maiden lady, is living in Philadelphia. The grandfather of George Ross was David Ross of Ross-shire in the North of Scotland. Would like much to know if any of the Scottish branch of the Ross family are living?

Lancaster, Pennsylvania. (MRS.) DAVID G. ESHLEMAR.

ROSS (p. 53).—George Ross, one of the signers of the American Declaration of Independence, resided in Lancaster, Pennsylvania. According to Harris's 'Biographical History of Lancaster County,' he was married to Ann Lawlor, who is said to have been "a lady of most respectable family." One of his sons, George Ross, Junior, was from 1788 to 1790 Vice-President of the Supreme Executive Council of Pennsylvania. Another son, James Ross, was an officer in the American Revolution, and was subsequently a judge in Louisiana. The Ross family is now nearly extinct, being limited, I am informed, to a brother and sister, both unmarried, who reside in Philadelphia. There are several families in Lancaster who are descended from George Ross in the maternal line.

BUTLER.—Thomas Butler was born about 1672–5, came to America with his wife Elizabeth, and settled in Keitting, Maine, about 1698. He was a man of scholarly attainments, used the Ormonde arms, and was doubtless connected with that family. Can any one give the exact date and place of his birth, and his family connections? Also that of his wife, or any information in this direction?

LAUNCE FAMILY.

The following Note is copied from a folio manuscript volume in the Halesworth Church Chest :—It is in the handwriting of Thomas Fella of Halesworth. Near the commencement of the book is an elaborate full-page pen-and-ink drawing, representing "a tree of divers fruits." In the centre of the vine is the figure of a man (nude) holding in each hand one of the branches. An eagle with head bent is immediately behind him. Among the upper branches of the tree, birds, butterflies, bees, and monkeys are disporting themselves, and a snake is entwined round the lowest branch. On the dexter side of the trunk is a bull, and on the sinister a cow, with the words "bull and cowe;" a border of acorns surround the design, and the monogram of Thomas Fella is repeated twice, shewing that it was drawn by him. The volume commences with a curious prayer from which I quote the following :—"Allthough we deck our bodys never so gloriously, or hoyse ourselves vp in the hyest degree of pride or take into o^r^ heads the fume or smoak of that odious and detestable weede Tobacco, or that we gitt never so much by violent iniurye or biting vsury yet shall we all sleepe in the grave and become wormes meate stinking carcasses dust and ashes," etc.

Dolman Family.—Will any reader of 'Mis. Gen. et Her.' obligingly name each or any of the Courts or depositories where I am likely to find the License Bond and Affidavit of Samuel Dolman or Dōman, who married Ann Martin, "by License," at Newbury, Aug. 10, 1767, both being described in the Church Register of that parish as "sojourners" there. From another source it seems the latter was but 17 years of age, and about six years his junior.

As they extend the Pedigree of this family printed in Berry's Kentish Families, you may think them worth recording in the 'Miscellanea.' I should feel obliged if any one could inform me whether they are now extinct.

Pedigree of the Family of Elwes.

When in 1871 I compiled the Pedigree of this Family, which is printed in my 'History of Hertfordshire,' I was unaware of several genealogical facts which have since come to my knowledge. The early part of the Pedigree already printed is marvellously accurate, considering that I compiled it without any extraneous help; but a member of the family has shewn me that there are some mistakes, and many omissions, in that part comprised within the last forty years. For these I am in no way to blame, as I trusted to another living member of the family, to whom I sent proofs for correction. He supplied me with full details of his own branch, but omitted to notice my imperfections with respect to his relatives. Though the corrections in the early part, here made, are few and unimportant, I have transcribed the whole Pedigree from the period whence it can be authentically traced.—J. E. CUSSANS.

The present family of CARY-ELWES quarters:—Gules, a griffin segreant Or, holding in pale a banner Argent, charged with a double-headed eagle displayed Sable, the staff compony of the first and the last, for GABOTT; Gules, on a fess dancetté Argent, between six crosses-crosslet fitché Or, three anchors Sable, for RAWORTH; and Argent, on a bend Sable three roses of the first, on a canton Or an anchor of the second, for CARY.

HOARD OR HOWARD OF EWELL AND GUILFORD, CO. SURREY.

In Volume I. of Nichols' 'Topographer and Genealogist' (pp. 33–42) I printed a "Pedigree of the Family of Hord of Salop, Oxon, and Surrey," and said it was believed that "the Ewell branch of the Hords was perpetuated to the present day." The grounds for this belief were that the family of Howard or Hoard, whose pedigree follows, bore the ancient arms of the family of Hord, and that for some unknown reason the name was changed to Howard. But there was always a suspicion, indeed a belief, notwithstanding the arms borne, that this was a genuine offshoot of the Effingham branch of the illustrious family of Howard; which seemed borne out by the fact that Thomas Hoard, the Yeoman of the Tents, etc., bore an office which seemed to have some affinity to the duties of Sir Charles Howard, Knt., of the Effingham family, he being Verderer of Windsor Forest, and holding kindred offices, and it was known that Charles Hoard or Howard, son of the Yeoman of the Tents, etc., was engaged in an occupation connected with deer and forests.* In addition to this, as three sons of the Yeoman, etc., lived at Guildford, and Merrow, where Sir Charles Howard lived for some time, is close to that town, the proximity was suggestive of a connection.

But all these fine-spun theories were shattered by a single accidental discovery. Last November, whilst looking at one of the Register Books at Somerset House (Irby), in pursuit of some Kentish wills, in the first page I turned over, my eye caught the name of Hoard in the will of Elizabeth Antill of Ewell. This, in connection with a search often instituted, and as often baffled, excited a lively interest; and, on reading through the will, I found precisely the names of the four sons and the daughter of the Yeoman of the Tents. But of course this was not conclusive. However, I had got a clue, which I followed. I examined the wills of the family of Gunn, and subsequently, turning over the pages of a register book with other objects, most luckily came across a will that I despaired to find, that of John Wood of Carshalton, whose contents elucidated the whole inquiry, and clearly established the descent (though not the precise channel) of the Yeoman of the Tents from the Hords of Ewell, and moreover shewed the inaccuracy of the traditionary connection with the Waterman family.†

The wills that establish the descent in question are these:—1. Elizabeth Antill of Ewell, widow (Irby, 1), dated 20 Sept. 1694, and proved 16 Jan. 1694–5, wherein she mentions her nephew Wm. Hoard—her sister Catharine Hoard—her children, Thomas, William, John, Charles, and Catharine Hoard—her brother Thomas Hoard—her mother, still living—Ann and Dorothy Gunn, her brother John's children, to whom she gives a messuage and an acre of land held of the manor of Ewell, and a messuage in Long-Ditton to her niece, Elizabeth Gunn—to her nephew, Charles Hoard, "one joyned chest"—her father-in-law, James Antill—her nephew, Wm. Hoard, sole ex'or. 2. William Gunn of Ewell, yeo., by his undated will, pr. in the Commissary Court of Surrey 4 March 1672–3, mentions his wife Santa-Maria—his d. Elizabeth [Antill], his daughter Hoord, and his two grandchildren. 3. John Wood of Carshalton made his will 4 Sept. 1661, which was proved 26 Feb. 1661–2‡ (Laud, 30), wherein he desires to be bur. in Carshalton

* See an account by the present writer of Sir Charles Howard of Merrow, near Guilford, his offices, parentage, etc., in the 'Genealogist,' vol. v., p. 106; and in vol. ii., p. 349, of the same work, an account of hitherto unknown members of the Effingham family.

† This was that Thomas Hoard, Yeoman of the Tents, married a sister of Sir George Waterman, Knt., Lord Mayor of London, as stated in 'Topographer and Genealogist' (i. 40), Howard's 'Miscellanea,' N.S., i., 316, and 'Genealogist,' ii., 351. It will be seen that there was a connection, but more remote and indirect, viz., that Thomas Hoard, the yeoman's wife was niece by blood of the first wife of Sir Geo. Waterman. However, Anne W., d. of Sir Geo. W., in her will d. 1734, and proved 1738, appoints her cousin John Howard sole ex'or, which led to the inference that John, the father of Sir Geo., was grandfather of both, which appears not to have been the fact; so the cousinship must have arisen from John Wood of Carshalton, who was grandfather of Anne W. and Catharine, the mother of John Howard, who himself married Hannah Wood, probably a relative.

‡ John Wood, gent., was bur. at Carshalton 14 Sept. 1661.

Church—he gives to his daughter Gun "so much money as will release the land of her husband, which is now conveyed to my son Waterman, and convey the same to 'Sanktey' [Santa-Maria] Gun for life and to her heirs"—to his dau'r Gun for her children £350, and £12 a year to her husband, Wm. Gunn—rest to my well beloved dau'r, Mrs. Anne Waterman, and her heirs for ever, wife of Mr. Geo. Waterman. She to be executrix. Witnesses, Edmund Hord and Geo. Waterman. 21 May 1663, Commission issued to Vicar of Carshalton to prove effects of John Wood of Ewell.

The pedigree of Hord of Ewell now follows to shew the probable channel of descent of Hoard alias Howard.

Notes.

The names of his issue, as recorded on brass in Ewell Church, correspond to those mentioned in his will, except that William, John, Catharine, and Elizabeth appear to have predeceased him. But there is a discrepancy in the recorded issue of his son Edmund, who is said to have left three sons, Arthur, Alyn, and Edmund, and three daughters, Dorothy, Elizabeth, and Anne. In the printed 'Proceedings in Chancery,' temp. Eliz. (ii. 84), John Pank and Elizabeth his wife, late wife of Arthur Horde, on behalf of Thomas Horde, his son and heir, proceed against Cuthbert

Browne, Eliz. Browne, Edward Horde, Allan Horde, and others, to establish plaintiff's title to divers lands in Ewell and Epsom, late the estate of the said Arthur Horde, deceased. The memorial must thus have erroneously substituted Edmund for Edward, and that Edward is the right name is proved by the mention of it as his cousin (nephew) in the will of his uncle, Thomas Hord. These proceedings further state that Elizabeth, mother of the said Arthur, was then wife of Cuthbert Browne, and that she inherited for life the lands in question, under the will of her husband, Edmund Horde, dated 11 Nov. 11 Eliz. [which, however, does not appear to have been registered, nor is any will of Arthur Hord to be found].

This Edward Hord was evidently the same person as is mentioned in a cause, Hord v. Hord (C 1 H H, xix.—Record Office), dated 1635, wherein the orator, Thomas Hord of Ewell, gent., states he is seised of the manor of Fitznell alias Fennells, in Ewell, Ebsham, Nonsuch, Cuddington, and Cheam, remainder to Edmund Hord of London, gent., as son and heir of Edward Hord, late of Richmond, gent., deceased; that Elizabeth was wife of the said Thomas, and that Edmund sold his said reversion to Thomas. And in a cause, Hord v. Parker (C 1 H H, xviii., 26), it appears that Dorothy Hord of London, spinster, was the orator; that Anne Hord of Richmond, deceased, spinster, was her aunt; and that her will was dated Feb. 1647 (not registered). A Dorothy Horde was bapt. at Richmond Sept. 29, 1608, evidently the daughter of Edward.

The 'Visitation of Surrey, 1623' (Harl. MSS. 1561), makes Edward Hord third son of Alan Hord of the Middle Temple, and says he married Mary, daughter of John Millett of Hayes, co. Middx., giving that match this issue,—Edmund, Dorothy, Anne, Mary, Elizabeth, Frances, and Joan. This is evidently a misplaced match, and would seem to mean Edward Hord of Richmond aforesaid. This latter Edward might have married a Millett, as the will of John Millett, Esq., of Hayes, dat. 1628 (Ridley, 24), mentions Allan Hendrye (a cousin of Tho. Hord, ut ante) and Anne Hendry, his sister Isabel Millett, and his sister Mary Parker; and as Isabel Millett in her will, dat. 1649 (Pembroke, 43), mentions her cousin Allan Hendry and his sister, ux. John Garraway, Esq., and her (Isabel's) sister Mary Parker alias Horne [which is probably a misnomer for Horde]. John, the only son of the said John Millett, mentions no children in his will dat. 1651 (Bowyer, 61). Moreover (Close Rolls, Record Office, 17 Car. I., 18 pars., No. 11), an indenture was made 24 Aug. 17 Car. I. (1641) between Geo. Millett of Hease (Hayes), co. Middlesex (brother of Isabel), gent., of the one part, and Edward Hurd, citizen and ironmonger of London, and Mary his wife, of the other part, whereby, in consideration of £130, a conveyance is made of one acre and one messuage in Hayes to Hurd. This Edward could not have been the Edward Hord of Richmond, who was dead in 1635, but might have been his son. And the Mary in the deed might have been the Mary alleged wife of Edward Hord in the 'Visitation.'

In the pedigree in Harl. MSS. 1561, this Thomas Hord is described as of Islington, 1635, and by Elizabeth, his wife, daughter of Wm. Philips of Dewchurch, co. Hereford, having issue,—William; Edmund; Thomas, s.p.; Thomas, s.p.; Anne; Elizabeth; Sarah, s.p.; and Mary, s.p. All this may or may not be true. What we know is, that (Close Rolls, Record Office, vol. 46, 14 Car. II., quinta pars., No. 38) an indenture was made 10 Sept. 1662 (14 Car. II.) between Valentine Dobbins of Kingsale in Ireland, merchant, and John Neeller of Gray's Inn, gent., of one part, and Thomas Hoarde of Ewell, gent., son of William Hoarde of Ewell, gent., of the other part, whereby, in consideration of £480, the manor of Fitznell alias Fennells is released to the parties of the first part. The William here was doubtless son of the Thomas of 1635.

The parish registers of Ewell only give the following information about the family. There are no entries after 1676.

Mar. June 7, 1635. Thomas Hord* and Marie Weller.
Bapt. Dec. 30, 1640. Thomas, s. of William Hord.

In the Commissary Court of Surrey, the will of Mary Hord of Epsom,* widow, dated 13 June 1680, was proved 4 Feb. 1680–1, wherein she mentions her kinsman John Hord, gent., her daughter Mary Hord, under age, her friend Timothy Cutler of Ewell, brewer, and her brother James Callant.

In 1683 (but this date is doubtful) administration is granted in the same Court to Mary (? the above-named Mary), relict, of the effects of Edmund Horde of Epsom. Inventory, £91.

1660–86, the Archdeaconry Court of Surrey contains no wills of Hord, Hoard, or Howard.

In the Hearth Tax for Surrey, 15 Car. II., 1663–4, Mrs. Hoard is rated at four hearths for Ewell; Edmund Hord of Ewell for four hearths; and Tho. Hord of Ewell for seven.

Notes.

In one of Mr. Camden Hotten's Catalogues there is mentioned "A short Narrative of an extraordinary delivery of Rabbits performed by Mr. John Howard, Surgeon of Guildford. 8vo. 1727. Ditto, second edition, 1727."

The will of John Howard of Guildford, Surgeon, dated 11 Oct. 1751, was proved at Doctors' Commons 18 March 1755. He thereby gives to his two daughters, Hannah and Catharine (whom he appoints sole executrix), his messuage in which he dwells in the parish of the Holy Trinity, Guilford, and another messuage therein, also lands and tenements in Stoke next Guilford; to Catharine lands and tenements in Stoke; to Abraham, his son, the messuage which belonged to his late brother, William Howard, deceased, and appurtenances, in the parish of the Holy Trinity, and lately in the occupation of Tho. Miller, Esq., deceased, for life, after to Thomas Howard, his grandson, and his heirs for ever. To Abraham his chirurgical books, etc., his horses, his silver mug, his silver hilted sword and hanger. The residue of his personal estate to his daughter Catharine.

The following memorials are in the church of the Holy Trinity, Guilford:—

I.—Thomas Howard, chirurgus qui per 50 fere annos in hoc oppido artem quam probe intellexit, honeste exercuit, nec sibi inauspicatem, nec suis infructuosam, nec pauperibus onerosam. Illi erat mens una et eadem probitas mutari nescia corrumpi respuens. Partium fortasse studiosa proposita tamen uspiam tenax. Ætati tandem ingravescens morte quæ plurimæ eripuit placida succubuit Ann. { ætatis 73 / Dom. 1736-7.

Monumentum posuit vidua hoc post hæc socio fruitura sepulchro Letitia Howard.

Also the body of Hannah Howard, his wife, who died the 28th day of August 1748, aged 66 years. III.—Near this pillar lie the remains of Mrs. Letitia Howard, widow of the late Mr. Thomas Howard, an eminent surgeon of this town, ob. Dec. 31, 1750. She was daughter of Sir Robert Heath, one of the Barons of the Exchequer in the reign of King James, and Letitia his wife, was a sincere member of the Christian faith, endowed with simplicity of manners, lived in great innocency, and died the death of the righteous. Reader, go thou and do likewise, and remember that without holiness no man shall see the Lord. This stone, as a token of respect and affection, was erected by the Rev. Mr. Thomas Heath and Mr. Benjamin Willply, nephews and executors of the late Mrs. Jane Heath.

Woolward, Woolland, or Wollard.—A reference to a pedigree of this Suffolk family, into which Lord Nelson married, required.—G. T. W. M.

Cooper.—Can any officiating minister of a parish in Kent, where the registers go back to the sixteenth century, oblige me with any entry of the name of Levy Cooper, late in that century or early in the seventeenth? My ancestor, Rev. Levy Cooper, was presented to the rectory of Sapcote, Leicestershire, in 1622, by Sir John Tufton, whom his father, Thomas Cooper, served as steward. Sir John's son, the first Earl of Thanet, died at Sapcote on July 1, 1638, and his body was carried thence for interment to Rainham. My grandfather used to say that he had heard that there were once distant relatives of ours living at Sittingbourne.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS IN BATH.

At and within the north gate of Bath, stands the ruins of a verie old church, knowne formerlie by the na'e of S. Marie's Church, converted beyond the memorie of man into a free schoole and lodgings for a M^r.

Over the dore next to the street leading into the said schoole is this engraven on a free stone table :—

Schola libera Gram'aticalis ad institutionem pueroru' Bathon in linga latina instruct ex institutione Edwardi sexti quonda' Regis Angliæ, anno regni sui sexto, Anno Domini 1552.

Md. y^t June 19, circa an. 1678, being then at Bathe, I walked out of the south gate to a village in the parish of Widcombe called Hollow-way, because deep and hollow in the side of a verie steep hill, leading from Bath to Wells. That part below the way is not verie steep and therefore most houses of y^e said village stand there, but the other part above is so steep y^t it lookes rather like a green wall than hill. In y^e middle part of the Hollow-way on the right hand stands a little old decrepit hospitall built originally for lunaticks. At this time there are but two, lately four, and formerlie there have been six lunaticks. On the west side of this hospitall is a pretty chappell now standing, and over the porch close leading therunto hath been a brass inscription to shew who had been the founder of y^t Chappell, but it hath been long since toren off.

After I had entred into y^e porch, I found on the east wall these verses engraven on stone, in an English character: (Of the south porch.)

Thys chapill floryschyd with formosyte spectabyll in honor of Mary Magdalen. Prior Cantlow hath edyfyd, Desyring you to pray for him w^th youre prayers delectabyll.

That sche wyll inhabyle hym in hevyn there evyr to abyde.

On the roof of the porch is cut in wood on a sheild, a key and a dagger, saltire wise, w^ch is the ar'es of the Priory of Bathe.

In the middle of the chappell I found this engraven in an Engl. character, on a flat free stone :

Robert Gibbes and his wife, 1525.
I desire you of your charite for the soules above written. Prayers.

* Dr. John Sibthorp. The "son John" above alluded to was buried in Bath Abbey 14 Feb. 1796, and has a handsome marble tablet erected to his memory on the wall near the vestry door inside that church.

On a marble table in the north wall, Ann wife of Nathaniel Bigges of this parish, who, after his decease, married Thom. Nicholas, citizen of Bathe. She died 6 Apr. 1662, æt. 63. (On this monument is parted p' pale, or and arg., on a fess sab. between 3 birds sab. as many bezants.)

An English copie of verses follow, w'ch I omit.

On a free stone und'neath :—

Nathan Biggs, grandchild to the above mentioned Nath. Biggs, died 17 Aug., 1664.

In the east window :—

Arg. fess engrailed vert, between 3 escallops sab.

There have been two more coates of ar'es, but they are broken out of the window. P'haps they were those belonging to y^e^ Priorie of Bathe, and to the na'e of Cantilupe or Cantlew.

The windows of this chappell are full of painted effegies (set up in y^e^ beginning of K. H. 8.), viz., of Scripture saints, namelie the two Maries, S^t^ Peter, S^t^ Barthelmew, S. Philip, S. James, etc., also on each side of y^e^ east window is a neach in w^ch^ probablie have been the images of the two Maries, and on the north side of y^e^ Chappell is another neach wherein p'bablie was the image of S. Peter.

This Hospitall and Chappell is called S. Marie Magdalens hospitall and chappell, and hath belonging thereunto as I conceive an yearlie fair w^ch^ is kept on y^e^ hill above it.

The two lunaticks y^t^ are now there (of w^ch^ one is a female) are kept by an old man who is a cobler and keep' therof, and hath p'd yearlie to him for their diet and lodging £13.

ELWES PEDIGREE (page 133).—With reference to this Pedigree I would observe that as Head of the family I have always used the Crest of Elwes with motto "Deo non fortuna," and that of Cary with motto "In utroque fidelis." Different mottoes are, I believe, used by other branches.

RIDLAND.—William Ridland was in Charleston, Massachusetts, as early as 1662. He married Patience Davis, had issue, and died in 1694, aged upwards of 60. Magnus Readland was in York, York Co., Maine, U.S.A., as early as 1717. He married Susanna Austin, and had issue. Tradition says he came from Scotland. A family of Ridlands have long been settled in the parish of Sandsting, Shetland ; and as Magnus is a common name there, it is thought probable that our ancestor was of the Shetland family. I have found the name Ridland in some ancient London records. Can any one inform me by letter if there are families of this name now living in England or Scotland ?

* Samuel Jaumard was son, by his first wife Sophie, dau. of Elie Detandebaratz, a Refugee from Rochelle, of Samuel Jaumard, 3rd child, by Susanna Jousseaume his wife, a native of Niort, of the Rev. John Jaumard, a Refugee from Talmont in Lower Poitou, and Vicar of Arundel, in Sussex, 1686-94.

† Dr. Coombe was also a refugee for conscience sake. Proscribed, imprisoned, and banished as a loyalist, he left his native city, where he had already won high reputation as a preacher, and came to this country in 1778. He was a man of mark, on terms of friendship and in warm sympathy with such men as Benjamin Franklin and Anthony Benezet, and in London admitted to the set to which belonged Garrick, Goldsmith, Johnson, and Sir Joshua Reynolds. He continued for many years Private Chaplain to Lord Carlisle, and, amongst his earlier preferments, was somewhile Minister of Curzon Street Chapel, and Vicar of Tenterden, Kent, a living he resigned in 1806 in favour of his eldest son by his first wife, the Rev. John Riché Coombe, born 21 May 1774, in Philadelphia, where his father had married, 13 May 1773, Sarah Anne Leake, eldest dau. of Bernard Badger by Susannah his wife, dau. of Philip Riché of Hempsted Long Island, son, by Susanne Bridou, of Denis Riché, who emigrated from one of the maritime provinces of France circ. 1700. * He was descended from Robert Skinner, Bishop successively of Bristol, Oxford, and Worcester, 1637-70, whose arms, which appear in a window at Bristol, were Sable, a chevron or between three griffins' heads erased argent.

N.B.—The only authority for the arms is that of private family information. It may be added that thirty years since there still existed in East London, in close proximity to the Eastern Counties Railway, an inn known under the sign of "The Chassereau Arms."

Enquiries made at Niort shew that a Jaques Chassereau of that place, who m. in 1626 Jeanne de Ville, and d. in 1639, left issue, with two daughters, Jeanne, b. 1630 (wife of Pierre Delavault), and Marguérite, b. 1636, a son Jaques, who m. Susanne Fieurre. But the proof of connection, if such existed, with the Refugee Jaques, is wanting. His descendants are believed to be extinct in the male line, but there were other Refugees of the name, which occurs in the Registers of St. Anne's, Soho, St. Giles, and St. Martin's in the Fields. A few instances are added :—At St. Anne's, Soho, were married, in July 1727, Peter Chassereau and Anne Bouvot, who in 1740 were living in Berwick Street. The latter died in this year, and in her will, witnessed by Paul Menetrie and Albertine de Pontieu de Rigaut, she makes her husband sole heir and executor, and "if there shall be any one, whether of France, of Holland, or of England, who shall pretend to my succession, he shall be cut off with a shilling." On 30 May 1736, at St. Giles in ye Fields, was bapt. James Servant, son of Anthony and Elizabeth Chassereau. On 21 Aug. 1754 were married, at St. Anne's, with Lic. Archbp. Cant., Matthew Gourjon and Mary Anne Chassereau, both of that parish; and at the same church was buried, 2 Aug. 1773, an Eleanor Chassereau.

Chassereaus (presumably of Huguenot origin) are also to be found to this day, in the humbler walks of life, in the county of Sussex.

FAMILY OF HORNER, CO. SOMERSET.

With a Daughter of this House Capt. Harington of Corston and Kelston, co. Somerset, secondly intermarried.

This table also serves to illustrate the connection between the Families of Harrington and Malte of London, Scutte of Stanton Drew, Horner of Mells, co. Somerset, and Champernowne and Harington of Dartington, in Devon, commencing about the Period of the Dissolution of the Religious Houses in England.

John Horner of Stoke St. Michael, co. Somerset, whose ancestors were of standing about Mells, and in the district of Mendip even before the dissolution of the Religious Houses, appears to have purchased the manor of Cloford of Roger Basing, Esq., of Cirencester, about 35 Henry VIII., and next year to have settled it upon his son, John Horner, jun., on the occasion of his marriage with Meriel Malte, daughter of John Malte, citizen and merchant tailor of London.*

John Horner, jun., afterwards Knight of the Bath, became heir not only of his father's property, but also of the bulk of his uncle Sir Thomas Horner's estates in 1555. The Horner family became much enriched by investing in the purchase of Grants from the Crown of some of the confiscated estates of such Religious Foundations as Glastonbury, Bruton, Bath, and Keynsham. Hence Horner is one of the names occurring in the old Somerset jingle—

"Windham and Horner, Barkley and Thynne,
When the monks went out, they came in;"

and in the nursery rhyme that has amused more children than ever were born in Somerset—

"Little Jack Horner
Sat in a corner,
Eating his Christmas pie,
He put in his thumb,
And pulled out a plum,
And he cried, 'What a good boy am I!'"

The plum here referred to we presume was an Abbey-estate, and the righteousness of the act consisted in the disendowment of Popery. Absit omen from the Church History of to-morrow!

After being twice married, Sir John Horner died Sept. 24th, 1587, leaving his son and heir, Thomas, then 40 years of age.

This Thomas Horner was Knight of the Shire 17th Elizabeth, and Sheriff of Somerset 4th James I. He was thrice married (his third wife being a French lady by extraction, daughter of Count de Montgomery, a Huguenot leader, when she was relict of Gawen Champernowne, Esq., of Dartington, co. Devon), and died in 1612. John, his son and heir, succeeded to his estates. This gentleman was Knight of the Shire in 1645, being one of the few Parliamentarian adherents of good position in the county of Somerset. He married Ann, daughter of Sir John Speke, and became the father of a numerous family. Among the daughters of his house was Ann, who became second wife to John Harington, Captain of Horse in Oliver's forces, then of Corston, and of whose biography and alliances we are now treating. When this John Horner died, Oct. 5, 1659, George succeeded him as his son and heir. This is the George Horner mentioned in conjunction with his brother-in-law Harington in the 'Nugæ Antiquæ' in reference to some political meetings which took place in Bath in 1646. He never represented Bath, but always the shire when returned to Parliament. As we only write of this family in consequence of its contact with that of Harington, we do not further extend these introductory notes upon it, but leave the Pedigree which follows (for which our thanks are mainly due to the generosity of the Rev. F. Brown, F.S.A.) to explain the subsequent descent of the Horners to modern days, adding only some special notes to illustrate the particular period of Horner family history when Horner and Champernowne† became associated.

* With the history of Malte we have already become acquainted in some degree (cf. 'Misc. Gen. et Heraldica,' Vol. III., N.S., pp. 18, 19), as he was made foster-father of Ethelreda, a base daughter of Henry VIII., and first wife to John Harington, Esq., of Stepney and Kelston.

† Oddly enough, the Champernownes subsequently allied themselves with Harington of co. Rutland; and their estates, if we mistake not, have descended to a Harington, but known by the additional name of Champernowne, assumed on entering upon the heritage of Dartington.

* Although Gawen Champernowne, according to the 'State Papers Domestic,' was divorced from his wife, the Lady Gabrielle Roberta Montgomery, in 1582, he appears to have received her back again, because in his will, made May 20, 1588, he speaks of "my child yet unborn," and the Lady Gabrielle proved his will in the minority of their son Arthur, 1591-2. Moreover, she subsequently married, and appears to have been fully received into a good county family; for about 1593-5 [? the exact date] she became the third wife of Thomas Horner, Esq., of Cloford. His second wife Jane had died in May 1591 (buried at Mells 3 June). Now Horner had a son, Edward, bapt. in Aug. 1597. This son was clearly the issue of his third marriage. And in his will, 1611, we find that the house in Bristol, which he bequeaths to Lady Montgomery his wife, he directs should pass, after her death, "to Edward Horner my son." This is to say, he was to succeed his own mother. Again, Ursula, one of the daughters of the Lady G. Roberta, by Champernowne, associates Edward Horner and his son Daniel in her will with her own sisters, the Champernownes, and names no other Horners. There seems no doubt, therefore, that Edward Horner was Lady Montgomery's son. Her son Arthur, by Champernowne, was born 1580; her youngest child by same husband was born 1592; and then in 1597, about two years after her second marriage, she bore a son by Horner. Now, if she married first at 18 or 20 years old, this history seems both possible and probable; and this explanation may solve a crux which, we believe, has afflicted the family history of the two houses of Champernowne and Horner.

† Their son Arthur Champernowne was heir, and from him ultimately descended Jane Champernowne, sole heiress of Dartington, who married Rev. Richard Harington, of the Rutland Harington stock.

Anne's Bounty for the Augmentation of the Maintenance of the Poor Clergy, especially in Augmentation of the Vicarage of Abbotsbury, Dorset, and then of such Vicarages in Dorset, Wilts, Somerset, or Devon, as the trustees should think fit. Wills in Brief of Scutte, of Stanton Drew, co. Somerset.

The will of John Scutte is extant at Wells, Court of Probate, dated the last of July, proved . . . . 15 October 1557.

The will of "Antony Skutt of Staunton Drew," Esq., is dated 27th May, 31st Elizabeth, G.C.P. (Leicester, 62).

He desires to be buried at Stanton, Somerset; bequeaths to Edward Horner, Esq., "one silver bowle of the value of three pounds six shillings and eightpence;" says, "my Cousin Thomas Horner of Mells standeth bounde to me for £500," this amount he leaves (after his own decease, and that of Gertrude his wife) to his daughter Martha, and her heirs; to John Horner, one of the sons of Thomas Horner, he bequeaths £50.

Proved by Gertrude Skutt, Relict, 12th July 1589.

(For previous notice of Scutt, see 'Misc. Gen. et Her.,' Vol. III., p. 19.)

The Will in Brief of Gawine Champernowne, Esq., of Dartington (Harrington, 36).

Dated, May 20, 1588. . . . . To my daughters Elizabeth, Marie, Katherine, Ursula, Frances, Jane, and Susan, 300 marks and all my marriage money, which I ought to have from the Count and Countess Montgomery, to be divided among them. Arthur my son (under 21) to be Ex'or.

By codicil, March 16, 1591-2, testator leaves a legacy, "to my child yet unborn." [This child proved to be a girl, and was christened Bridget,] and was afterwards the wife of Thos., the son of Dr. Still, Bp. of Bath and Wells.

Proved by Lady Roberta Montgomery, alias Champernown, Relict of deceased, —— to administer during the minority of her son Arthur, April 3, 1592.

Thomas Horner, Esq., subsequently married the Lady Roberta Montgomery, Relict of Gawen Champernown, probably in August 1595.

The Will in Brief of Thomas Horner of Cloford, Esq. (Fenner, 79).

Dated, Feb. 15, 1611. To be buried at Cloford. [He was buried there, June 20, 1612.]

To Lady Montgomery, my wife, certain lands, etc., provided she keeps seven score deer within the park, and my house situated in St. Austin's Green, near the city of Bristol, and after her death to go to Edward Horner, my son . . . . To my son Thomas Horner, a tenement in Leigh; my son Tristram Horner; to Mary Champernowne, my daughter, £100. Twenty pounds to the eldest son of my son Symes; £20 to the eldest son of my son Danvers*; £50 to each of my daughters, Bridget* and Frances* Champernowne; £100 to my daughter Ann Webb, etc. All the rest of my goods to John Horner, my son and ex'or. To Sir Hugh Smith, Sir John Rodney, Thomas Warre, John Symes, Esq., William Claxton, and Thos. Brooke, Gent., Overseers, £5 a piece. Proved Sept. 20, 1612.

Abstract of the Will of Dame Ursula Sammes† of Shaftesbury, Dorset, Widow (from Sadler, 73).

Her will, dated Feb. 1634-5, describes her as late wife of Sir Gerrard Sammes of Little Totham, Essex, Kt., deceased. She desires to be buried near "my sister Bridget Still, deceased." To the poor of Cloford, Somerset, £5; to my sister, Mary Champernowne, £10; to my brother, Edward Horner, £10;‡ to his son,

* From the above Will it is evident that Horner treated his wife's family, which she bore to Champernowne, as brothers and sisters to his own family. Whatever irregularity of conduct there may have been in times past, it was clearly condoned by both her husbands.

† She was by birth 4th daughter of Gawen Champernowne, Esq., by Lady Gabrielle Roberta, his wife. She first married at Cloford, Dec. 19, 1611, Hugh Sexey of Bruton, Founder of Sexey's Hospital, who died 1619. She secondly married Sir Gerrard Sammes, Kt., of Lauchford Hall, Essex, and administered to his goods May 1630. She herself died 1634.

‡ "My brother, Edward Horner." This distinctly shews (if further proof were necessary) that Edward Horner was the child of Lady Roberta Montgomery, because he could only be Ursula's "Brother" maternally.

Daniel, £10 ; to my brother Still's son, £20 ; to my brother, William Collins, £50 ; to my niece, Frances Grove, £50; to my sister, Susan De la Barre,* my diamond caskenet. If my only son, Richard Sammes, should die, my manor-farm of Shernewood, in Canewden, Essex, to my brother Edward, and his son Daniel ; and to my servant, Lydia Gooddin, my wedding-ring, given me by my 1st husband, Mr. Sexey. Proved by Thos. Still, Ex'or, June 3, 1635.

Armorial Bookplate.

LITTLETON OF CORNWALL.

A correct account of Judge Littleton's family is given by Lord Coke, who shews that the Judge's father was Thomas Westcote, who married Elizabeth Littleton: the father of Elizabeth, Sir Thomas Littleton, who died in 1421, being the last male descendant of this branch of the Littleton family. The Judge took the surname of his grandfather, while his three younger brothers, Nicholas, Edmund, and Guy, retained their father's name, Westcote.

From this youngest son, Guy Westcote, the county historians of Cornwall—Lysons (p. 140) and C. S. Gilbert (vol. ii., p. 298)—have, in common error, followed Collins in his 'Peerage' (Sir E. Brydges's edition), and derived the family of Littleton in Cornwall: whereas, by an examination of the 'Visitations of Cornwall, 1531, 1573, and 1620,' and of that of 'Shropshire in 1623' (Heralds' College), it will be seen that this is a distinct branch of the same family; and by the Inquisitiones post mortem, anno 5° and 20° Henry VII. and anno 17° Henry VIII., that Hugh, the son of William Littleton, was a contemporary of the Judge, and that in 1470 he married Joan, the daughter of Stephen Gerrard of Polscothe in St. Winnow. The eldest line of this branch were tenants in capite from 5th Henry VII. to the 20th Elizabeth, and became extinct in 1577, when Thomas Littleton of Lanhydrock bequeathed his lands in Devon and Cornwall to his sister's descendants, the Trenances. But the younger line, spoken of by Tonkin (D. Gilbert's 'Parochial History,' vol. iii., p. 227), Lysons (p. 236), and C. S. Gilbert (vol. ii., p. 299), with the customary vicissitudes attendant on younger sons, are still flourishing at and near the localities in which their ancestors first settled, as well as in other parts of the country.

The Arms of the Cornish Littletons are: Argent, a chevron between three escallop shells Sable, quartered with those of Wrottesley of Staffordshire. All the Judge's descendants quarter the Arms of Westcote.

Redmayne and Redman Family.—Could any reader of the 'Mis. Gen. et Her.' give me information concerning the family and descent of Robert Redmayne, D.D., of Norwich, and if he was related to Bishop Redman of Norwich, whose father is buried in Great Shelford Church, Cambridgeshire ?

South Dene, Gateshead-on-Tyne. Norman Redmayne.

Gloster Ridley, D.D.—Some one was kind to answer my query relative to a portrait of Gloster Ridley, D.D., but the directions were not sufficiently specific to enable me to find the portrait. I found the poem named in a public library in Boston, but no portrait. I wish my informant would be so kind as to point me directly to this portrait by letter.

Saco, Maine, U.S.A. G. T. Ridland.

* Simon de la Barre married Susan Champernowne at St. Gabriel's, Finch Street, London, after License, dated April 19, 1616.

He was treasurer of the fund for rebuilding Lewisham Parish Church in 1776. How the book came into the possession of the Parish Church is not known. According to the copy of the Vis. of Kent, 1619, in Harl. MSS. 1548, Thomas Isaacke of Badowe, co. Essex, gent., mar. Alice Ellis. His will (Noodes, 53), dated 31 July 38 Hen. VIII. (1547), mentions his wife Anne, and the families of Bourne and Ashburnham (who with the said Stephen Ellis mar. the three coh.'s of John Cromer), and his brother Francis Wyatt, Esq. (who must have mar. the sister of Stephen Ellis). Edward Isaacke, Esq., of Well Court, co. Kent, brother of Tho. Isaacke, made his will 29 April 14 Eliz. (Petre, 19) ; mentions his wife Joyce (who must have been another sister of Stephen Ellis), and "my nephew Edward Wyatt, son to my brother Francis Wyatt, Esq." There is no will of Francis Wyatt at Somerset House.

The Richard Elys whose will is given in 'Miscellanea,' III., 223, was, according to the De Banco Roll, memb. 316, 17 Hen. VI., son of Thomas Elys, gentilman, of Kennington ; and Thomas Elys, gent., and Guy Ellis, gent., of Kennington, were two other sons.—W. S. E.

STEPHENSON OF ALSTON, CUMBERLAND.—Can anybody kindly supply me with information regarding the early history of this family, and the pedigree of Henry Stephenson who was buried there in 1734? His son, Sir William Stephenson, was Lord Mayor of London in 1764; and from him are descended the Earls of Warwick and Mexborough.

14 Hill's Place, London, W. W. H. JACKSON.

DUDLEY FAMILY.

The Editor of the 'Visitation of Yorkshire, 1563–4,' recently issued by the Harleian Society, states, in a footnote to p. 105, that Anne, a daughter of Edmund Dudley of Yanwith, was married to Edward Gibson of York, and he cites as his authority the pedigree of Gibson on p. 520 of the 'Visitations of 1584–5 and 1612,' edited by Mr. Foster.

But on referring to this pedigree it will be found that Edward Gibson married "Anne, dau. to . . . . Dudley, 2nd bro. to the Lord Dudley." This does not in any way support Mr. Norcliffe's assertion; for the Christian name of Anne's father is not given, and certainly Edmund Dudley of Yanwith was not a "2nd bro. to the Lord Dudley."

Anne was really the daughter of John Sutton, alias Dudley, of Compton, co. Stafford, by Elizabeth his wife, only daughter of Sir Thomas Whorwood of Compton Stourton. This John Sutton, alias Dudley, was the younger of the two sons of Edward, Lord Dudley, by his second wife the Lady Jane Stanley, and was baptized at Dudley in Nov. 1569. John and Elizabeth had issue (besides Anne) a son Edward* (who was living in 1612 and 1616), and a daughter Elizabeth. Also, according to Adlard's 'Sutton-Dudleys,' they had a "son & heir," Whorwood Dudley. In 1660 Edward Gibson, son of Edward and Anne, claimed the Castle and Barony of Dudley. He alleged that in the reign of Queen Mary, Dudley Castle, with all the honours, manors, etc., were entailed upon the heirs male of the body of Edward Sutton, Lord Dudley. That the said Edward, Lord Dudley, had two sons, Edward (late Lord Dudley) and John. That Edward "died in the late King's reign,† having no male issue,‡ and the barony then came [ought to have come, he means!] to his brother John, who died leaving two daughters, Elizabeth, who had no issue, and Anne, to whom petitioner is son & heir lawfully begotten by Edward Gibson, 3rd son of Sir John Gibson, of Welburn, Yorkshire."

Petitioner, who has been in the service of the States of Holland these fifteen years, has been kept from the possession of Dudley Castle and premises, to which he is the undoubted lawful heir, by Sir William Brereton. He prays to be invested and settled in the Castle and Barony. This petition was referred to the Committee for Privileges, but no further proceedings are mentioned (L. J., xi., 75).§

There is another error in this volume which calls for correction. It appears from the pedigree of Strangeways (p. 302) that Cecily, daughter of Sir William Willoughby, was married to "Lord Dudley," and had issue, among others, "Margaret, Lady Powes." The Editor, in a footnote, quotes Burke's 'Extinct Peerage, 1846,' p. 505, to shew that this "Lord Dudley" was John, but comes to the (correct) conclusion that he was Edward. "Only (he adds) Margaret, wife of Edward Grey, second (sic) Lord Powis, was his aunt, not his daughter.—See p. 105 of this Work."

Now, in the first place, this pedigree does not call Margaret the wife of Edward, Lord Powis—it simply describes her as "Lady Powes;" and, secondly, even if the pedigree on "p. 105 of this Work" were correct—which it is not—the Margaret therein called "wyf to Edward Lord Powes" would be half sister, and not aunt of Edward, Lord Dudley. But the true husband of Margaret, daughter of Edward, Lord Dudley, and Cecily (née Willoughby) his wife, was John Grey, Lord Powis, and by her he was father of the Edward‖ who, if we are to believe this Dudley pedigree, married his mother's aunt! Heralds' Visitations are not infallible, but editors ought at least to try to be.

H. Sydney Grazebrook.

* He was plaintiff in an Exchequer suit as to lands in Sedgley, leased to John Sutton, alias Dudley, and Elizabeth his wife, "father and mother of the plaintiff," by "the present Lord Dudley," brother of the said John. (See Thirty-eighth Report of the Deputy-Keeper of the Public Records, pp. 607, 659, etc.)

† He was buried at St. Edmund's, Dudley, 24th June 1643.

‡ His only son Ferdinando had predeceased him, leaving an only d. and h., Frances, who inherited the Barony.

§ Historical MSS. Commission, Report VII., p. 109. Papers of the House of Lords.

‖ Edward really married the Lady Anne Brandon, daughter and coheir of Charles, Duke of Suffolk.

RUSSELL, THOMAS, of Barmingham Hall, Norfolk, circa 1720.—What relation, if any, was he to the Duke of Bedford of that period? I have heard it stated that he was his first cousin. His arms are the same as those of the ducal house. One of his daughters married Mr. Chamber, Recorder of Norwich, and another Dr. Beevor of that city. Of the former lady I have a very fine portrait, supposed to be by Gainsborough, and I should be very glad of any information respecting her or her family.

† See Notice in Haag's 'La France Protestante,' edition of 1877, p. 183, where he is mistaken for his brother Isaac, in so far as his being married and being the continuator of the line is concerned.

‡ A Daniel Rabache and Elizabeth Gilles had two children baptized at the chapel of La Patente, viz., Marie, born 11 Jan. and bapt. 15 Jan. 1694-5, and Elizabeth Marguérite, born 27 Feb. and bapt. 28 Feb. 1697.

§ Jean Chapoul Lafage appears, probably by a printer's error, at p. 148 of Burns' 'History of Foreign Refugees,' where his marriage is quoted, as Le Sage. This marriage, where the bride signed as Amiand, and the father and two brothers, who were among the witnesses, as Amyand, illustrates the indifferent use of the y and i by the members of the family.

Sir Nicholas Cole, 3rd Bart. O. s.p. 1711. = Anne, dau. of Collier Campbell.

Sir Mark Cole, 4th Bart. O. s.p.

I should be very glad of any information which would help me to complete the above scanty pedigree. Burke, in his 'Extinct Baronetage,' says that Sir Ralph Cole, the 2nd Baronet, died in 1660. Hutchinson, in his 'History of Durham,' says that Sir Ralph Cole, 19 April 1701, for the consideration of £16,800, with an annuity of £500 for his life, and £200 for the life of his wife if she survived him, conveyed the castle and estates of Brancepeth to Sir Henry Bellasyse, Knt., who died in 1719. Either Burke or Hutchinson, probably the former, must here be in error. In 1774 the estate contained 4600 acres of freehold land, and the rent was estimated at £2134 per annum. Is there any full pedigree of the family of Forster of Etherston which records this marriage with a Cole? Thos. Forster of Etherston, Esq., married, 27 Jan. 1651, Mary, dau. of Sir Nicholas Cole of Brancepeth, Knt., and left issue (see Foster's Pedigree of the Forsters and Fosters).

Edward(5). Robert, sonne & heire. THO. SCOTT.

The following notes have been communicated by JA^{s} R. SCOTT, Esq., F.S.A.:—

(1) Sir Thomas Scott of Scot's Hall in Smeeth, Sheriff of Kent 1576, Comptroller of the Household of Queen Elizabeth. He died 30 Dec. 1594, and was buried in Brabourne Church. His monument was destroyed by the Parliamentarian Forces in 1648. His will dated 17 Dec. 1594, proved 7 Jan. 1594-5. Sir Thomas married secondly, in 1583, Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Ralph Heyman of Somerfield, Kent. She died 29 June 1595, s.p., and was buried at Brabourne.

(2) Sir John Baker was in succession Recorder of London, Attorney General, Chancellor of the Exchequer to Henry VIII. (who left him £200 in his will), Secretary to the Privy Council, Speaker of the House of Commons, and Ambassador to Denmark together with Henry Standish, Bishop of St. Andrew's, the ancestor of Longfellow's "Miles Standish." Sir John was the only Privy Councillor who refused to sign the will of Edward VI., whereby that monarch's two sisters were to be excluded from the throne. Queen Mary loaded him with honours, and being a Papist, he became a zealous tool in her hands as an enemy of Reformers, and thus, together with his mistress, obtained the unpopular name of "Bloody," having been instrumental in burning two Protestant Martyrs in Canterbury.

He built a magnificent mansion at Cranbrook, of which only the gateway and other inconsiderable portions remain to this day. Queen Elizabeth paid in 1573 a visit to him here, and she afterwards proceeded to visit his two sons-in-law, Sir Henry Tufton, ancestor of the Earls of Thanet, and Thos. Sackville, first Earl of Dorset; but from characteristic jealousy avoided—although Her Majesty passed the gates of Scot's Hall—paying a visit to Sir Thos. Scott, Sir John's third son-in-law.

(3) Robert Scott of Mersham, tenth son of Sir Thomas Scott, married in 1610; buried at Smeeth.

(4) In Smeeth Church, against the north wall of the chancel in the Scot Chapel, is a marble monument with an inscription for Priscilla Scott, daughter of Sir Thomas Honywood, Knt., wife of Robert Scott of Mersham, Esq., by whom she had nine children (she died in 1648, aged 52); and for Mary Scott, daughter of John Moyle of Buckwell (Kent), Esq., second wife of Robert Scott, Esq., ob. 1652, aged 54, which concludes as follows: "being formerly the wife of Rich^d Godfrey, Esq., of Wye, by whom she had 22 children, being the first who made Mary Honywood of Charing a great grandmother in the 5th generation, and who lived to see 366 of her issue living. Robt Scott had no children by his second wife."

Monument in Smeeth Church to the two Wives of Robert Scott of Mersham.

Mrs. Mary Honywood of Charing (whose portrait, by Cornelius Jansen, is in the Scot's Hall collection) was a remarkable personage. She lived at Mark's Hall in Essex, and died 1620, aged 93, and saw of her own issue 16 children, 114 grandchildren, 228 great-grandchildren, and 9 great-great-grandchildren—a total of 367 descendants. In her youth she had braved the terrors of the reign of Mary Tudor, and at the risk of fine and imprisonment visited Newgate and witnessed the death at the stake of the saintly John Bradford, and on that occasion returned to her father's house in Crutched Friars, having lost one of her shoes in the crowd. Later in life, being sick as she believed unto death, and entertaining a morbid fear as to her future state, she sent for John Foxe, who encouraged her to hope and believe that the sickness from which she was then suffering would pass away, and prophetically told her that probably she would live to a great old age; whereupon Mrs. Honywood, who had at that instant a beautiful Venetian goblet in her hand, replied that she no more expected to rise from her bed of sickness than that the glass which she then threw against the wall would not be broken. The glass, however, chanced to fall against a chest, and fell to the ground without flaw or injury, and Mrs. Honywood, encouraged thereby, eventually recovered. The glass cup is still possessed by the family of Honywood at Mark's Hall, and regarded by them with appropriate veneration.

As an example of the extreme superstition which prevailed at this time, we print the following from amongst other interesting fragments from the Scot's Hall records. It is in the handwriting of Robert Scott, of Mersham, and endorsed as personally related by him :—

"Robert Scott, Esq., tenth (but sixth surviving) son of Sir Thomas Scott, of Scot's Hall, Knt., married Priscilla, one of the daughters of Sir Thomas Honywood, of Elmsmere, Knt., by whom he had nine children. Remarkable incidents which happened to the said Robert Scott and Priscilla, his wife, before their marriage, at their marriage, and after their marriage, before they had children. At their marriage, which was in or about the year 1610, the said Robert Scott, having forgot his wedding-ring when they were to be married, the said Priscilla was married with a ring with death's head upon it. Within a short time after they were married the said Robert Scott and Priscilla, his wife, sojourning with Sir Edward at Austenhanger, the said Robert Scott about Bartholomewtide fell sick of a desperate malignant fever, and was given over for dead by all, in so much as that he was laid forth, the pillows pulled from under him, the curtains drawn, and the chamber windows set open, and ministers spoke to to preach the funeral service, and a book called for his funeral, that was to have been kept at Scot's Hall, where Sir John Scott, the eldest brother, then lived. At night he was watched with by his own servant, named Robins, and another servant in the house, and about midnight, they sitting together by the fire in the chamber, the said Robins said to the other, 'Methinks my master should not be dead, I will go and try,' and, presently starting up, went to the bedside where his master laid, and halloaed in his ear, and laid a feather to his nostrils, and perceived that he breathed, upon which he called them up in the house, and they warmed clothes and rubbed him, and brought him to life again. He lived afterwards to be upwards of seventy-two years of age, and to have nine children. Another remarkable passage was that his wife, Priscilla, being then very sick also, they told her that he was dead. She answered that she did not believe that God would part them so soon. The said Priscilla, when born, was laid for dead, no one minding her, but all the women went to help her mother, who was then like to die after her delivery; but at last an old woman taking the child in her arms, carried it downstairs, and, using means, brought her to life. The other women, missing the child, and hearing the old woman had carried her down to get life in her, laughed at her as thinking it impossible to bring the child to life; but in a little time she brought it into the chamber, to the amusement of them all, and said she might live to be an old woman, and so she did to the age of fifty-two, and had nine children."

(5) Edward Scott of Longage in Lyminge, afterwards of Stepney, married Mary, dau. of Sir John Honywood, Bart., by whom he had issue two sons—Edward Scott, who married Anne, dau. of Jeremiah Johnson of Hackney; and Thomas Scott of Lyminge (born 1669), who by Elizabeth his wife, dau. of Richard Graves of Gloucestershire, had issue two daughters—Elizabeth, wife of William Turner of Canterbury, and Bridget, who died unmarried. Thomas Scott was buried at Lyminge, and on an altar tomb in the churchyard was the following inscription (now obliterated) :—

"Here lyes Interred the Body of Thomas Scott of Longage in ys
Parish descended of the ancient family of the Scotts of Scotts Hall in ys County the son of John Scott & Mary his Wife daughter of Sr John Honywood of Evenden who died the . . of Oct. Ano 1711 in the 51 year of his Age. And of Elizabeth his Wife daughter of Richard Graves of Gloucestershire Esq. by Elizabeth his wife daughter of John Robinson of Gravesend Esqre."

ARMS.—SCOTT, impaling Gules, an eagle displayed Or, beaked and crowned Argent [GRAVES].

It is traditionally asserted that Dr. Isaac Watts was tutor to Edward Scott and his brother Thomas, and it may have been at Longage Manor House in Lymynge, Kent, at which the parents of Edward and Thomas Scott resided, that the worthy pastor may have inculcated the lessons—in after years rendered into immortal verse—"Whatever brawls disturb the street, there should be peace at home." Longage House, now converted into a farm house, has still the remains in its oak-panelled rooms of its former importance. Longage and Sibton Manors in Lymynge at this time belonged to the Scotts, they and their descendants have now no estate in that part of Kent.

THE GOLDTHORPE FAMILY.

In Flower's 'Visitation of Yorkshire, 1563-4,' lately published by the Harleian Society, appears a pedigree of Goldthorp or Golthorp, in which there seems to be some error. According to this pedigree we find a William Goldthorp, son of John Goldthorp and Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Savile, married Jane, daughter of John Wentworth of Whitley Hall, and their granddaughter Jane married William Gaskon or Gascoigne. On reference to the Wentworth pedigree in the same Visitation, and that published by Mr. Foster in his 'Yorkshire Pedigrees,' the marriage of William Goldthorp and Jane Wentworth would appear to have taken place about 1500, certainly not much earlier, whereas William Gascoigne and Jane Goldthorp could not have been married later than temp. Edward I., or between 1270 and 1300 (see 'Visitation of Yorkshire in 1585,' and 'Yorkshire Pedigrees'), or about two hundred years before the marriage of the grandfather of the said Jane Goldthorp.

If this singular discrepancy in dates can be explained by Mr. Norcliffe, or any of the readers of the 'Miscellanea,' I should be obliged if they would clear up what appears to be a very unaccountable error.

GENEALOGICAL TABLE SHEWING THE DESCENT OF HARINGTON OF SOMERSET FROM THE REIGN OF HENRY VIII. TO A.D. 1700,

When a disruption of the Family took place, and the Elder Line became seated at Corston.

Having in previous papers concluded the history of Capt. John Harington of Corston and Kelston, I proceed now to shew the Genealogy of the Family in tabular form, commencing from the time of their first acquiring property in Somerset, down to the date of Capt. Harington's decease, 1700 A.D.

The reasons for breaking off the continuity of the descent at this date are, firstly, to be able to shew as full a table of the early descent as possible, within reasonable space; and, secondly, to mark distinctly the important effect on the family history which the death of this gentleman (Capt. Harington) produced, viz., a disruption between the two male lines descending from his third and fourth wives in such manner that the elder line became Haringtons of Corston, whilst the junior obtained possession of Kelston, the original Harington seat.

In consequence of this singular vicissitude in their family history, it seems desirable, on resuming the pedigree after 1700, to shew the ramifications of the Corston branch first. An arrangement which, if not explained, might have brought confusion to the minds of the ordinary reader when it was presented, inasmuch as Harington of Kelston has always had the lead.

NOTES TO THE PEDIGREE.

[1] No evidences have come to light in the course of the writer's researches on Harington, which add at all to the proof of a connection between this Alexander Harington and the House of Harington of Brierlay as set forth in the Grant of Arms 1568 (see 'Mis. Gen. et Her.,' Vol. III., p. 17). But, in the face of the Grant, it would seem improper to omit his name from the Genealogy.

[2] Sir James Harington died Dean of York, 1512, after holding many preferments, commencing with the Rectory of Badsworth, 27 May 1496. Admon. was granted of his estate to his successor in the Deanery, Thos. Wolsey, at York 26 April 1513.

This is the lady of whom her husband wrote :—

"A body chaste, a virtuous mind,
A temperate tongue, a humble heart,
Secret and wise, faithful and kind,
True without guile, mild without art,
A friend to peace, a foe to strife,
A spotless maid, a matchless wife."

[6] Historical MSS. Commission, Appendix to Fifth Report, page 267. Marquis of Salisbury, 2 Feb. 1602.—Articles against Edw. Rogers by John Harington.

Dr. Henry Harington of Bath records in his MS. Notes on his ancestors that the following lines were inscribed on Sir John Harington's bedstead :—

"Esto Memor lethi, sit sine labe torus,
Stulte! quid est somnus, gelidæ nisi mortis imago?
Longa quiescendi tempora fata dabunt."

[7] As no entries appear at Kelston of the baptisms of the subsequent children to Thomas, it seems to shew that the parents resided elsewhere, whether at Compton Dands, as some suppose, or at Chilcompton, cannot now be ascertained through want of early Registers in those parishes. That their father's residence, wherever it was, was not specially desirable, is seen by Dame Mary Harington bequeathing Fieldgrove to him, and that he subsequently used those premises, and died at Bitton. As we do not hear of any of this line except Benjamin, nor find them mentioned in their relatives' wills, we may surely conclude they died in infancy.

[8] Date and place of birth not known, but the name Ralph clearly points to the connection of his father's sister Elizabeth, married to Sir "Raphe" Egerton at Richmond in Surrey, 1606. If fourth son, he would be born about 1612. Thomas, Francis, and George, names common in Harington family, go first. Qy., to what family did Sir Raphe Egerton belong?

[9] Buried at Chilcompton (we doubt not), as her husband, who had no other connection than through his wife with that parish, was brought from Weymouth to be buried there. But the Registers extant are not old enough to prove her marriage or burial.

[10] This continued descent rests wholly on memoranda in Dr. Henry Harington's Notes, made about a hundred years ago, and may or may not be correct. I have no means of verifying it, as he gives no information of their places of birth, baptism, or death.

[11] He does not appear to have taken his B.A. degree, so he probably quitted Oxford after his father's death. He proved his father's will 22 Dec. 1670, and would seem to be the same with John, son of Benjamin Harington, legatee under the will of John Gostlett, Esq. (1684), who mar. this John Harington's second cousin, Mary, the dau. of John Harington, Parliamentarian. If the same, then he was living in 1695-6, the date of Mary Goslett's will. We know of no other "John, son of Benjamin," in the family of Harington connected with Gostlett, except in the Corston line, but that John was not born till 1702. One would gladly learn more about this John Harington of Weymouth, and Trinity College, Oxford. Did he ever marry? Did the line continue?

[12] Mary being born and buried at these dates, 1600, 1605, of course does not appear in Lady Rogers' will, 1598, who speaks of Sir John's four daughters.

	10 sons.	13 daughters. = 23 children.

[15] The family of this lady has not been as yet discovered; there are some intimations that she may have been a widow, and, perhaps, her maiden name "Coward." The discovery of her marriage entry with John Harington would be particularly acceptable, as she is the ancestress of the eldest surviving male line, which has representatives living (1882).

† Last Earl of Marlborough. See an episode in his life detailed in the following letter. Letter from William Ley to his sister (Dyonesse Harington), extant among the Harington papers (1881) :—

* These were granted to Richard Knight of Cowden, and to Richard Knight of the same, his uncle, 24 Aug. 1671.

† This estate in Cowden was granted, 1568, by Henry Foster of Cowden, yeoman, to Wm. Holmeden, and Margaret Foster, his daughter, then about to be married, and their heirs for ever. 1615, Isabel Knight (Saxbie), widow of John Knight of Cowden, yeoman, gives it to John Knight of Hartfield, yeoman, and Robert Knight of Lingfield, yeoman, in trust for her use during life, and after to George Knight her youngest son. 1627, George Knight, junior (son of John Knight and Isabel, both deceased), of Lingfield, yeoman, sells it to John Wickenden. 1659, various parties, representatives of John Wickenden, deceased, and Joan his wife, sell the two moieties to Richard Knight. This property passed from Knight to Bridgland, and through the marriage of John Smith of Fletching and Maresfield, who died 1793, æt. 79, with Sarah, daughter of John Bridgland of Maresfield, Gent., to their youngest son, Robert Smith of Fiddlers in Cowden, who died cœlebs 1830, æt. 71, and it then passed to the family of Stapley. About forty years ago there was hung up in the parlour at Fiddlers an embroidered shield of Arms, being the Arms of Sergison of Cuckfield Place, Sussex, within an escutcheon of pretence a quarterly coat, viz.:—1 and 4, Pitt; and 2 and 3, Azure, three fiddles Or sinister bendwise, on a chief Argent, three roses Gules, seeded Argent, presumably for the name of Fiddler. Vidler is a Sussex name, and may be a corruption of the Norman Vis-de-loup.

‡ Large iron works were carried on at Cowden, the hammer ponds of which still remain; of these the principal masters were the Knights and the Titchbornes, the descendants of both of whom are now Baronets. [Query, as to the Knights.] The Titchbornes resided at Crippenden, a good old mansion-house in Cowden of capacious size, in a parlour of which the following lines still remain, carved in fine relief, on an antique oak chimney-piece:—

"When we are dead,
And laid in grave,
And all our bones are rotten,
By this shall we Remembered be,
Or else we were forgotten.

† In the beginning of Henry VI., the manor of Bonnington alias Singleton became the property of Roger Bregland, or Bresland, as the name was sometimes spelt, who had good estates in East Kent, who had married Dionisia, daughter and heir of .... She survived him, and afterwards married John Cobb of Newchurch, and entitled him to the lands of her inheritance in this parish. (Hasted's 'Kent,' viii., 334.) Bermuda, St. George's Parish Register.—Allow me to make a correction in one of the marriage entries in the Register of S. George's Parish, Bermuda, as it appears on p. 183 of the 'Miscellanea Genealogica et Heraldica.' I know not whether the officiating clergyman made the mistake in the spelling of Mrs. Truscott's maiden name, or whether Colonel Vigors has incorrectly deciphered the Register in this particular instance, but as Mrs. Truscott was an aunt of my present wife, and I remember her when she was living in Baring Crescent, Exeter, I am able to state positively that her maiden name was not Huskison, but Hutchison. The entry then should be read thus: "1815. Jan. 10. Francis Truscott, Captain in the Royal Navy, and Catherine Rebecca Hutchison, by licence, by me, Philip Hudson."

RICHARD WARD.—Information is desired as to the parentage and ancestry of Richard Ward of Chester, gentleman. Traditionally, he is said to have been a barrister, but no confirmation of this has yet been found. His wife is believed to have been Katherine Neale, of a Leicestershire family. His sons were—1. Rev. Richard Ward, Prebendary of Lincoln (born about 1715), who died 1788, leaving issue; and (2) Rev. James Ward (born about 1719), of Hart Hall, Oxford, who made his will in 1742, when he was chaplain on board the "Norfolk," and died the following year. Any notes about Richard Ward may be sent to me direct.

NOTES UPON PEDIGREE OF JOHN HARINGTON OF STEPNEY;

HIS WIVES (1) ETHELDREDA, (2) ISABELLA; AND SOME DEALINGS WITH THEIR ESTATES.

Patent Roll, 33 Hen. VIII., part 8, 10 May (1541).

Grant to John Malte of demesne lands, etc. in Wachenfelde, Berks. [These he devised in 1546 to Etheldreda, his base [foster] dau., not then mar. to Harington. —F. J. P.]

Lysons's 'Magna Britannia,' vol. i., part ii., Berks, p. 369. Shrivenham.

"The manor of Watchfield belonged to the Abbot and Convent of Abingdon so early as the time of King Kenulf;* after the Reformation it was for a considerable time in the family of Willoughby, of whom it was purchased by Henry Lord Holland. By a subsequent purchase it became the property of Lord Barrington, and now forms part of the Shrivenham estate."

Ib.—"In the Chancel at Shrivenham are memorials also for the family of Blagrave of Watchfield in this parish."

Other County Histories and some MSS. have been inspected at the British Museum, but no further information has been obtained as to the descent of this manor. The question, therefore, still remains to be solved—How did this manor pass from Malte and Harington to Willoughby?—F. J. P.

* Dugdale.

Feet of Fines, Michaelmas, 2 and 3 Philip and Mary, Berkshire.

Fine between Thomas Harryngton and Thomas Thurgood, Plaintiffs, and John Harryngton, Esq., and Etheldreda, his wife, Deforciants, touching the manor of Watchyngfelde alias Wachenfelde alias Watchfelde, and lands, messuages, etc., there. To hold to Etheldreda for one month, and after that to John Harryngton and his heirs. [Precisely similar to a Fine in Somerset of the same date, affecting the Somersetshire estates derived from Etheldreda.]

De Banco Roll (Common Pleas), Michaelmas, 10–11 Eliz., Roll 656.

(1568.) Berks. A Recovery.—*Thomas Markham and Nicholas Blimston, Esquires, claim against John Harryngton, Esquire, the manor of Watchyngfelde, otherwise Watchenfeld, otherwise Watchfelde, and lands, messuages, etc., there. John Harryngton vouched to warranty Hester Harryngton,† who vouched John Howell [the common vouchee], who failed to appear. Therefore Judgment was given that Markham and Blimston should recover against John H., who should receive of the lands of Hester in recompense, and Hester should receive of the lands of Howell [the man of straw].

(1582.) Somerset. Inquisition after the death of John Harington, Esq. Manors of Kelveston, etc. He died 1st July 24 Eliz. (1582). John Harington, Esq., his son and heir, aged 21 years and upwards. [No Inquisition for Berkshire has been found.]

The other series of Inquisitions post mortem in the Court of Exchequer and Court of Wards do not contain any Inquest on this John.

There is an old Index which gives the names of the manors belonging to this John Harington,‡ and among them Matchenfeld (sic) in co. Berks; but it is not now known to what other book this Index refers.—F. J. P.

Court of Wards and Liveries. Miscellaneous Books. Books of Liveries, No. 9.

25 Eliz., 26 June (1583). Livery of lands to John Harrington, Esq. [afterwards, 1599, Sir John, Kt.], son and heir of John H., Esq.

[This is merely a formal document, though lengthy. It does not even state in which counties the lands were situate. This Livery is also enrolled on the Patent Rolls of the same year.]

10 Elizabeth, pt. 2, B. and S. by Henry Denny to John Harrington and Isabella his wife, Cheshunt Park, Herts.

Harington must have been tenant at Cheshunt in 1561, as his horsekeeper, Danyell, was buried there 15th Sept. in that year. (Cheshunt Registers.)§—F. J. P.

Close Roll, 10 Elizabeth, pt. 2, m. 9d.

(1567.) Indenture, 31st October, 9 Elizabeth, between Henry Denny of Waltham Hollye Crosse in co. Essex, Esq., of the one part, and John Harrington of Chesthunt in co. Hertford, Esq., and Isabelle his wife, of the other part.

For £1000 Denny bargains and sells to Harrington and his wife, all that his Park of Brantyngsley, otherwise called Chesthunt Park, in the parish of Chesthunte in co. Hertford, and now or late in the tenure of Harrington, with all deer, wild beasts, woods, etc. To hold to John and Isabel, and the heirs and assigns of John H. for ever, and to the use of the same.

A mem. among the Harington MSS. states this manor was conveyed to Wm. Cecil, 1570. [The famous Lord Treasurer.]

* This would be Isabella Markham's brother, Thomas Markham of Ollerton.

† Therefore Hester was living at this date (1568), and had right to the property thus passed.

‡ In Somerset, Gloucester, Notts, Dorset, and Berks.

§ Extract from Cheshunt Registers shewing John Harington resided there 1561:—"Burialle. Danyel, Horsekeeper with Mr. Harrington."

John and Isabella released and quit-claimed the premises to the said William and his heirs for ever, and for themselves and the heirs of John granted that they would warrant against all men, etc.

† A Dorothy Gatland was of Cuckfield, widow, 1639. Several wills of Gatland of Cuckfield and Sussex are at the Probate Court, Lewes. Henry Gatland of Cuckfield occurs in the Subsidy Roll, 1621; and the will of Henry Gatland of Cuckfield, yeo., is at Somerset House, dated 1675, whereby it appears he had lands in East Peckham and Hadlow, leaving surviving his wife Anne, a son Walter, the children of his deceased son Anthony, and two daughters, one of whom, Dorothy, was wife of John Wood of East Grinstead, tanner.

Phillips.—Elizabeth Reynolds Phillips married John Perkins of Teddington (M.I. at Staines) circa 1757. Her father, a clergyman, is said to have been a cousin of Sir John Phillips, father of the first Lord Milford. Can any one oblige me by either confirming or confuting this statement? Elizabeth R. Phillips was married from Highmore Hall, at Nettlebed, co. Oxford.

DANVERS AND QUATREMAINE.—Sir Robert Danvers of Culworth, King's Serjeant 1443, Justice of the Common Pleas 1450, ob. 1467, is stated in Baker's 'Northamptonshire' to have married "Agnes, d. of Rich[d] Quatremaynes of Rycot, Oxon," who, however, in a pedigree in 'Misc. Gen. et Heraldica,' N.S., III., 346, is stated to have ob. s.p. In Hatton's 'View of London,' p. 147, in list of persons sep. at St. Bartholomew's the Less, occur "Sir Rob[t] Danvers and Dame Agnes his wife, dau'r to Sir Richard Delabar," corrected in Stow to Delabere. In a pedigree of Danvers in Harl. MSS. he is assigned three wives, a dau. of Quatremayne, a dau. of Phetiplace, and a dau. of Delabeche, and his coheiresses are stated to be by different mothers. In the 'Visitation of Oxford,' published by the Harleian Society, the name of his wife is left blank. In Lipscombe's 'History of Bucks' it is judiciously noted that there are great discrepancies in the pedigrees of Danvers given by Betham, Kimber, etc. Is it known on what grounds Mr. Baker confines him to Agnes Quatremaynes? and is there any pedigree of Quatremaynes accessible which explains the arms occurring in the above 'Visitation of Oxfordshire,' and in Mr. Weare's 'Notes on Great Haseley Church'? Is there any foundation of fact in Leyland's romance of the connection between the families of Quatremayne and Fowler?

NOTES ON PEDIGREE OF FLETCHER.

The descents in the accompanying Pedigree are copied from the Records of the College of Arms, with the exception of the few entries in italics, which are taken from Deeds, Parish Registers, and County Histories of repute.

The Pedigree of Best is copied from one extracted from the Records of the College of Arms, 24 Dec. 1839, and verified by G. R. Harrison, Bluemantle. For Monumental Inscriptions, see Nash's 'Worcestershire,' vol. i., p. 379, under Elmly Lovet.

That of Fletcher, with Giffard and Pickering, is taken from a vellum roll certified by H. Murray Lane, Chester Herald and Registrar, and Edward Bellasis, Bluemantle, 3 Oct. 1880. The Pickering descent will be found in the 'Cheshire Visitation, 1664,' and is continued in the Heralds' College, and in Nichols's 'Collectanea Topographica et Genealogica,' vol. i. Portraits of Sir Willoughby Aston, Bart., Sir Richard Aston, a Judge of the Court of King's Bench 1765, and of Willoughby Richard Pickering, M.D., are in the possession of Colonel Fletcher, F.R.S.

There is little doubt but Margaret, wife of Thomas Fletcher of Shareshill and Water Eyton, whose husband was buried 24 Oct. 1610 at Shareshill, was a daughter of Ralph Alport of Cannock, mentioned in 'Staffordshire Visitation, 1663,' although the date cannot be proved, as the Cannock Registers commence in 1744, and the transcripts at Lichfield 1659. Some of the Alport property at Cannock came into the Fletcher family by this marriage, with the early title-deeds and an ancient seal of silver bearing the Alport arms and crest, as given in the Visitation, with the addition of a canton.

The descent of William Gibbons and Elizabeth Hawkesford from Bracebridge of Kingsbury, continued from the 'Visitation of Warwickshire,' will be found in Dugdale's 'Warwickshire,' edition Thomas, under Kingsbury; in Nichols's 'Leicestershire,' vol. iii., p. 1145; and in Nichols's 'Bibliotheca Topographica,' under history of Manceter.

The pedigrees of Bainbrigge and Burton are continued from the 'Leicestershire Visitation of 1619' by entries made in the Records of the Heralds' College down to 1830. They are printed in Nichols's 'Leicestershire,' and a full pedigree from the roll, dated 1830, signed by Francis Martin, Windsor Herald, is given in Noble's 'History of Derbyshire,' part ii., pp. 551 to 559. The Bainbrigge descent from K. Edward III. is given in Burke's 'Royal Descents,' and the Chichele descent and founder's kin at All Souls' College, Oxford, was extracted from the Records, and certified 26 Jan. 1843, by G. R. Harrison, Bluemantle. For Borough descent, see 4 Norfolk, 189, College of Arms, and Shirley's 'Noble and Gentle Men of England,' p. 211.

* Communicated by HENRY WAGNER, Esq., F.S.A. The Compiler's thanks are specially due to his obliging correspondent, the Rev. D. C. A. Agnew, Author of 'French Protestant Exiles.' Cf. Chapter xviii. in this work, on "the three Ligoniers."

† Lord Ligonier took part in all Marlborough's great battles, and his monument in Westminster Abbey is inscribed with the names of Schellenberg, Blenheim, Rammilies, Oudenarde, Malplaquet, Taniere, Dettingen, Fontenoy, Rocoux, and Laffeldt. This monument gives his age as 92, the 'Annual Register' as 91, while Haag appears to be correct in stating it at 89. Amongst many legacies he left £4000 to the [unnamed] "now second son of my eldest brother," and an annuity to Penelope Miller, spinster, of Southwark. He had no legitimate issue, but left a daughter Penelope, who had issue by her husband, Arthur Graham, Lieut.-Colonel of the 1st Foot Guards, somewhile of Hockly Lodge, co. Armagh, and of Dublin, with two sons, Ligonier Arthur Graham and John Jeffrey Edward Graham, four daughters, of whom Penelope became, in 1775, the first wife of Henry Vernon, Esq., of Hilton Park, co. Stafford, whose son, General Vernon, assumed in 1800, on inheriting his maternal property, the name of Graham, but resumed that of Vernon only in 1838. Mr. Vernon married secondly, in 1794, Margaret, sister to the Countess of Kilmorey, and second daughter of Thomas Fisher of Acton, by Margaret, daughter by Frances Godde his wife (who remarried, in 1733, Colonel John Wyvil), of Richard Pigot, of Hodnet, Salop. See Pedigree of Godde. ante Vol. III., 222.

‡ In Feb. 1788 the 'Gentleman's Magazine' records the death, "in her 100th year, of Judith de Ligonier, born at Castres 2 May 1688, cousin-german to General Ligonier," and adds, "there remain at Castres a nephew of the same General, and some grand-nephews of the eldest branch."

Issue two sons and five daughters. See 'Landed Gentry.'

* His will, made at Brussels 23 April 1744, "to settle how my worldly goods should be disposed of in case I should be such a ffool as to die," he being then Lieut.-Colonel to his brother Sir John Ligonier's Regiment of Horse, was proved by Sir John in the P.C.C., with a codicil, on 17 April 1746. (Edmunds, 124.) To him also there is a monument, raised by his brother, in Westminster Abbey. At the battle of Falkirk, on the 17th Jan., there fought both Ligonier's Foot and Ligonier's Dragoons, the 48th not receiving another Colonel until April 1746.

† Remembered for the influence she exercised on the poetic career of Count Alfieri, and through her portrait by Gainsborough, now in the National Portrait Gallery.

N.B.—Amongst desiderata remain the full identification of (1) Colonel Antony Ligonier; of (2) Abel Ligonier, described as clerk, when naturalized 15 April 1692; and (3) of Antony Ligonier de Bonneval, clerk.

In Burke's 'Landed Gentry,' it may be observed, it is stated, under 'Vignoles of Cornahir,' that Major James Louis de Vignolles, great-great-grandfather to the present representative of the family, married "Anne, sister to the Earl of Ligonier." Anne Marie de Vignolles undoubtedly was sister to Antoine Ligonier de Bonneval. But in 'La France Protestante,' MM. Haag, who are followed by Mr. Agnew, while unable to indicate his degree of (presumed) relationship with the brothers Ligonier, do not allow that he was one of them. In early life he appears to have been a fellow-student with Abel Ligonier at Geneva. As a refugee he received Episcopal Orders, was somewhile a military Chaplain, and afterwards Incumbent of the French Church founded by Lord Galway at Portarlington, where he resided till his death. He had married Judith Julie de Bostaquet, and in his will, dated 27 June 1732, and proved in the P.C.C. 6 July 1734 (Ockham, 161), by the Executors Mark Antony Mezerac and James Vignoles, he appoints his cousin Marie Dexoudun (a sister of James Louis de Vignolles), widow, guardian to his daughter Anne Marie, and names his aunt Mary Margaret Ladaveze alias Ligonier, his cousin Captain Antony Ladaveze and Abell Ladaveze.

[1] Barthélemy and his brother Jean Hervart, having, as bankers in Paris, made a large fortune, laid it at the feet of Lous XIII. at the critical period of the invasion of Alsace, thus enabling the King to retain 10,000 Swedish mercenaries in his army, and saving the State ; but the estates they received in return for these services were confiscated at the Revocation. They appear to have been of the same family as the Bavarian Chancellor, Jean Georges Herwart de Hohenbourg, who died circa 1625.

[2] Buried "in the new vault in the North aisle of the monuments, between S. Paul's and Edward the Confessor's Chapels." Cf. Colonel Chester's 'Westminster Abbey Registers,' p. 242.

[3] Rosine de Graffenried in her will names, besides her nephew Ralph de Luterman, "MM. Michael Frederick and Sigismund Cerjat, both children of M. Dedenesy," in terms which imply that there was already a relationship between them. While, as is seen, Sigismund Cerjat afterwards married her grand-daughter, his sister Ursula Frances Cerjat wove the ties connecting the two families still closer by becoming the wife of Francis Louis de Graffenried of Berne, and to him adm'on was granted in the P.C.C. to her estate 26 Feb. 1731.

[4] Baron d'Hervart, having been appointed by the new King to the post of British Resident at Geneva, seems (although in the first instance the Genevese, through fear of a complete rupture with their powerful French neighbour, refused to receive him) to have abode there until, on his appointment as Ambassador to the Swiss Cantons, he removed to Berne. The little town of Vevay, on the other hand, conferred on him the bourgeoisie, a privilege bestowed during upwards of a century on only thirty-two French Refugees. Apparently he remained as British Minister until the death of William III. in 1702, although Weiss, who calls him Herwart-Desmaretz, dates his services as from 1689 to 1697. It was in 1695 that the plan of establishing Vaudois Colonies in Germany was devised and carried out by him. Of his later private life little or no record remains beyond that found in the Register of God's House, Southampton, which runs as follows :—

"1721. Monsieur Philibert d'Hervart, baron d'Hunninghen, francois refugié mourut en cette ville, le 30 Avril, 1721, aagé de 76 ans et fut enterré dans l'eglise paroissiale d'Holirood auprès de M^r^ Frederic d'Hervart son fils, le mercredy suivant, son corps étant conduit à la sepulture par tous les ministres Francois et Anglois de cette ville, et de S^te^ Mary, et par une grande multitude de francois et d'Anglois. Sous le regne de Guillaume troisiesme il fut envoyé extraordinaire a Genêve, en Suisse, etc., et s'étant retiré en cette ville il y a laissé des marques de sa grande charité pour les pauvres, en laissant à cette église un billet de £32 . 5 sterl. plus par testament £50 sterlin, aussy bien que de son zéle pour la gloire de dieu, en laissant pour l'entretien du ministere de cette eglise la somme du £12 sterlin de rente, il avoit donné il y a viron 8 mois quatre mille livres sterlin à l'hopital des françois refugiés du London volgairement apellé la providence. Les pauvres des deux nations Françoise et Angloise perdent beaucoup a sa mort, dieu veuille avoir pitié deux, et leur susciter des personnes aussy charitables. Dispersit, dedit pauperibus, justitia ejus manet in sæculum sæculi."

[5] The position and popularity this grande dame, "the most charming, agreeable woman in the world," enjoyed in London Society are witnessed to by contemporary diarists such as Evelyn and Mary, Countess Cowper. For the inventory annexed to her will of her jewels, pictures (which include portraits of her parents by Mignard, and of Lord and Lady Eland by Sir G. Kneller), and china, see Agnew's 'Protestant Exiles,' where it occupies no less than four pages and a half (iii., 199-204).

[6] Jâcques Philippe d'Hervart presumably was sent, in compliance with his father's will, to Holland, to his mother's first cousins, Lieut.-Colonel des Utins and Major de Corsié, both of the Swiss regiment of Chambrier, "there to learn the Art of Warr the only profession of a gentleman who in these unfortunate times can scarce apply himselfe to anything else. He is born a Swiss and subject to their Excellencies of Berne, and may be advanced in the regiments not those styled regiments of Berne, in which the citizens of Berne only may be admitted." Forty years later we find that he had disposed of his Chateau d'Hauteville, near Vevay, to a Pierre Philippe Carmac, whose daughter and heir conveyed it to her husband, M. Grand, grandfather to Gonsalve d'Hauteville, the present proprietor, and to Leonce Grand d'Hauteville, who mar., as above, a dau. of J. P. d'Hervart's great-nephew, Lieut.-Colonel C. S. Cerjat.

[7] Madame Jacques d'Hervart was probably dau. of Abraham Duntz, a merchant of Amsterdam, whose portrait exists at Nostell Priory.

[8] The 'Gentleman's Magazine' for 1802 (lxxii., 2, 688) records that J. F. Maximilian Cerjat "had married an English lady of large fortune." She was probably born in London, where her parents (both of them related to the Girardots), natives of Paris, were married at the French Chapel in Spring Gardens 9 Oct. 1728.

[9] A sister of Captain Henry Bristow married Tillieux Girardot, who was Director of 'La Providence' from 1770 to 1793, and another sister became second wife of the first, and mother of the third, Lord Lyttelton. The Bristows also intermarried with Debonnaire.

[10] The children of Lieut.-Colonel Charles Sigismund Cerjat are known as de Cerjat, the recognition of their right in the prefix to the surname proper having been obtained from the authorities of the Canton de Vaud. This pedigree records six of the Seigneuries by which they have been distinguished as the Cerjats de Bressonay, de Denesay, de St. Leger, de Syens, de Moudon, and d'Allaman.

[11] Information in regard to M. de Mey would be gratefully welcomed. Sabine Lizette d'Hervart's great-uncle, Daniel Cerjat, had in 1669 m. Ursula, dau. of Volfgang Mey, and about that date a Barthélemy May (Galiffe's 'Familles Genevoises,' iv., 282) held the Seigneurie of Huningen.

(c) See p. 221 ante.

N.B.—On 3 Sept. 1720, adm'on to the estate of Louise Aimée de la Maugere was granted to her husband, Peter de Cosne, the warrant for the said adm'on stating that the lady had been dead for two full months. It follows that there were either two Peter de Cosnes living at the same time and in the same place, or that the entry in the Register is inaccurate. Information upon this point would be gladly welcomed. On 22 Aug. 1744, letters of adm'on were again granted in the P.C.C. to Peter de Cosne to the estate of his deceased wife, Ann Boirousseau.

[1] John Wickart, D.D., Canon of Windsor 1684, and Dean of Winchester 1692, died s.p. 29 Jan. 1721-2, having survived his wife Susanna, a dau. of Sir John Colladon, sister of Sir Theodore Colladon, and great-niece of Sir Theodore Mayerne, all three eminent physicians. His will, dated at Windsor 6 Nov. 1721, was pr. in the P.C.C. 1 Feb. 1721-2. (38, Marlboro'.)

[2] Henri de Massue, Marquis de Ruvigny, the first Governor of the French Hospital (and immediate predecessor in this office of Philibert d'Hervart, Baron d'Huninghen), who had been created Earl of Galway in 1697, was elder son of "the undisputed chief of the refugees," Henry Massue, Marquis de Ruvigny; and Rachel, widow of the patriot William, Lord Russell, who was beheaded in 1683, was daughter to the latter's sister, who had married the Lord Treasurer, Thomas Wriothesley, fourth and last Earl of Southampton. Amongst the legacies left by Lord Galway were an annuity of £40 to Mme de Chavernay; £500 to Peter de Cosne, and £1000, £1500, and £2000 respectively to his children Charles, Henriette, and Ruvigny; £500 to Madame de Vignoles, and £500 and £1000 respectively to her children Angelica (Madame d'Hervart) and Henry.

[3] Lucrece Le Venier, a native of St. Euville in La Beauce, and wife of Charles de Chavernay, seems, on becoming a widow, to have permanently attached herself to the Refugee Colony at Southampton, being aunt alike of the De Vignoles and of the De Cosnes, who were resident there. In a brief will, made while campaigning in Spain on 15 April 1706, Francis de Vignoles (to whose widow, 38 years later, Ruvigny de Cosne acted as Executor), father to Mme Maximilian d'Hervart, refers to the sum which Lord Galway "obliged himself to give to my wife by our settlement of marriage, as likewise what our aunt Lucretia de Chavernay doth give us by the same contract." Her will, dated 15 May 1723, was pr. by her Executors, Captain Peter de Valor and Major (afterwards Major-General) Francis Rufane, in the P.C.C. 27 Oct. 1736. (217, Derby.)

[4] Peter Daussy, a Refugee from Rouen, settled at Southampton, left a son Charles, who appears to have survived till 1781. Will dated 20 Aug., and pr. in P.C.C. 16 Nov. 1716. (203, Fox.)

[5] Jean de Remy de Montigny d'Yvetot was elected Director of the French Hospital 3 July 1723. His will, he being then of Duke Street, Westminster, was dated 31 Oct. and pr. in the P.C.C. 4 Nov. 1734. He had married, at the Hague in 1704, Elizabeth, one of the four daughters of Antoine de Massanes, and sister to the Marquise de St. Auban. Her will, dated at Greenwich 6 August 1737, was pr. in the P.C.C. 31 Jan. 1737–8. Their only son, Anthony, had predeceased them. Of five brothers three were Refugees in England, the other two being Paul de Remy de Montigny-Menage, who died unmar. in 1719, and Isaac de Remy de Montigny de Cambron, who resided at Ipswich, and died also unmarried in 1747.

[6] Charles Boileau, known as the Sieur de Castelnau,—though a younger brother, Maurice, who remained in France, had, by an agreement dated 10 April 1717, obtained the family property, —was a connection, his mother having been a De Vignoles. His wife here mentioned was one of the three daughters of Daniel Collot d'Escury, a Refugee who had entered the British Service, and who died at Dublin in this same year.

[7] John Gignoux, the Executor appointed by Ruvigny de Cosne, having predeceased him in 1769, adm'on was granted to Jedidah d'Hervart, the surviving residuary legatee. The testator expresses his wish to be buried with his parents in S. Michael's Church, and there, "near his dear friend," William d'Hervart desired in 1780 to be laid also. Jedidah d'Hervart, too, testifies to the regard in which he was held by his relations, desiring to be buried in Millbrook Church "in the same manner as my dear relation Ruvigny de Cosne." The legacies left by him were numerous. It may be noted that in the 'Gentleman's Magazine' he appears disguised as Rovigny Decon. On the relationship between the families of Massue de Ruvigny, Le Venier de la Grossetière, and De Cosne de Chavernay, see Agnew's 'French Protestant Exiles,' ii., 1–4.

GORE.

The following inscription is from a mural monument formerly in Powerstown Parish Church, co. Kilkenny, Ireland, but since the sale and demolition of that church (owing to the recent disestablishment of the Irish Church), it has been removed, and is now in the entrance porch of Grange-Silva Church, same county.

"Here lyes the body of RALPH GORE, Esq^re^, late of Barrow Mount, in y^e^ County of Kilkenny, son of Sir John Gore, of Secum in Hertfordshire, Knight, who departed y^s^ life 12^th^ day of December, 1721. Aged 68 years."

"Sacred to the memory of Brigadier-General ARTHUR GORE, Lieut.-Colonel of the 33^rd^ Regiment of Foot, who fell on the 8^th^ March, 1814, at Bergam-op-Zoom, while gallantly leading his men to the attack on the rampants of that place."

This meritorious officer, in the course of twenty-six years' service (twenty of which were passed in India and eleven in the command of the 33^rd^ Regiment), distinguished himself on various and trying occasions by his gallantry and zeal, "In testimony of the high esteem which his public character excited, and the greatful feeling of regard which his mild and conciliatory conduct in the command of the 33rd Regiment never failed to call forth, the officers of that Corps have erected this monument." Born at Kilkenny 30 June, 1773.

On the edge of the old "Communion Table" of Powerstown Church is written: "The gift of RALPH GORE, Esq^re^, to the church of Powerstown, 1766."

REGISTER OF MR. DUGARD'S PRIVATE SCHOOL, FROM 15 APRIL TO 30 SEPTEMBER 1650.

In compiling the Register of Admissions into Merchant Taylors' School, from 1562 to 1874 (the first volume of which Work is now ready), I have been permitted to make use of a valuable MS. List made by the Rev. Will. Dugard, and now in the Library of Sion College. Mr. Dugard was Head Master from 1644 to 1661, but in 1650 was suspended by Bradshaw for printing Salmasius' 'Defensio Regia.' On his release from prison he kept a private school on St. Peter's Hill, and the pupils taught by him there were registered in the same volume with those whom he admitted before and afterwards into Merchant Taylors' School. Although the method of entry in it is not quite so exact, yet the list is not without its value as a supplement to the larger Register of the public school.

PEDIGREE OF GRESHAM OF GRESHAM AND HOLT, CO. NORFOLK, AND OF TITSEY AND LIMPSFIELD, CO. SURREY.*

Which family was at once seiz'd in Norfolk of thirty-five mannors,[1] in Suffolk of five,[2] in Cambridgeshire of one,[3] in Kent of three,[4] in Sussex of two,[5] in Surry of nine,[6] in Middlesex of two,[7] in Somerset of two,[8] in Derbyshire of three,[9] in Yorkshire of nine,[1] and of twelve granges,[2] and several other villatæ and considerable possessions in the same county, and of three mannors in the bishoprick of Durham;[3] as appears by severall letters patents, fines, deeds enrolled, inquisitions post mortem, wills, and private evidences, now in the hands of some of that family. And out of which family, within the compass of an hundred and fifty years last past, there has been one baronet,[4] nine knights batchelers,[5] whereof one knighted in the field;[6] one baronet's wife,[7] and nine knights' wives of the name and family of Gresham;[8] and have issued from them in that time two viscounts,[9] seven baronets,[10] twenty-four knights,[11] two countesses,[12] five baronets' wives,[13] and twenty-two knights' wives.[14]

This introduction is given by Ward in Appendix V. to his 'Lives of the Gresham Professors,' 1740, with the following note: "This introduction is prefix'd to a genealogy now in the family at Titsey, with which I was favour'd by the present Sir Marmaduke Gresham, baronet." It is not now among the muniments at Titsey. The date of it may be fixed approximately by the following evidence. First the mention of only one baronet places it between the year 1660, in which Sir Marmaduke Gresham was created a baronet, and 1696, the date of his death. Elizabeth, Countess of Carlisle, being doubtless one of the two Countesses mentioned, would make it later than February 24, 1684, on which day her husband, Edward, second Earl of Carlisle, succeeded to the title; and if Frances, Countess of Huntingdon, be the other, it will be later than the 2 May 1690, the date of her marriage. The Viscountcies of Townshend and Weymouth were neither of them created till 1682, which is a further proof that it cannot be earlier than that.

A BRIEF ACCOUNT OF THE COMPLAINT MADE BY SIR JOHN HARINGTON OF KELSTON, Kt., TO THE STAR CHAMBER, AGAINST HIS BROTHER-IN-LAW, EDWARD ROGERS OF CANNINGTON, SOMERSET.

(A fair example of how family quarrels were conducted in that day, 1602 ?)

This deed [now among the documents at the Public Record Office, London,*] represents on the part of Sir John Harington of Kelston and Anthony Bartlett† [his attendant on the occasion] that Lady Jane Rogers,‡ mother of Mary, Sir John's wife, died at Bath about 19 Jan. 44 Elizab., seized of certain lands after making her last will and testament 17 Oct. 43 Elizab., wherein she devised legacies to s^d^ Harington and his children, and to Francis Rogers, son of Edward Rogers, Esq., then about eleven years of age, which Francis Rogers (a minor) and Mary Harington (dau. of the testatrix) were left ex'ors of her s^d^ will. Sir John Harington, in right of his wife, took upon him the adm'on of all Lady Rogers' goods during the minority of s^d^ Francis. The plea alleges that Edward Rogers, father of s^d^ Francis, was not "at home" when Sir John Harington went to the house at Cannington, upon the affairs of the deceased, who had declared that her son Edward was not "to intermeddle" with them.

Edward Rogers not being at home, Haryngton [nevertheless] went in and stayed at Cannington, occupying the rooms he had often used in her Ladyship's lifetime.

Edward Rogers, on return, felt annoyed that he was not named ex'or to his mother (to whom, however, he had "entirely misdemeanned himself"); and the plaint states that Sir John Harington being thus at Cannington with Anthony Bartlett, said Edward Rogers, after consultation with one Rich^d^ Weekes, then Under-Sheriff of Somerset, and others [named in the plaint] maliciously and riotously determined to break into the house at Cannington, "& beate wounde & mayme Sir John Harington & his servant."

Lady Rogers was then (19th Jan.) lying dead in her house at Bath when Edward Rogers and confederates tumultuously assembled at Cannington with swords, daggers, pykes, halberds, and pistols, and beset the house. Harington had it locked and bolted, etc. The assailants battered the doors and wyndows. Harington promised the door should be opened to Edward Rogers so soon as he should present himself. The assailants desisted for a while; but at 10 o'clock at night of the s^d^ 19 Jan. (Harington being in bed) the Under-Sheriff Weekes, with about 40 others, by virtue of his office, and without a writ, commanded [the party] in her Majesty's name. They set ladders to Harington's chamber window. Harington, as a Justice of the Peace, called on them to desist. They persisted the more. He demands if Edward Rogers is among them, and opened the door to him, "he promising to be civil; but, when admitted, used reproachful words." Harington declares that he explained to Edward Rogers the reason of his coming, viz., about the funeral of Lady Rogers, and that Edward Rogers said "he (Harington) might throw her body in a ditch, if he would." Harington, hurt at this speech, shewed his offence. Rogers then caused Harington to be carried by five or six of his party to a dark room, where he was locked up without "fyer, candle, light, bed, or stool to rest for nine hours." The Rogers party meanwhile forcibly broke up divers "boxes,§ casketts, males (sic), and portmanteaus of the s^d^ John Harington, and ransacked them at their pleasure till 11 A.M. next morning."

The prayer is that her Majesty would grant unto Harington warrant of subpœna directed out to E. Rogers, Richard Wickes, gent., etc., etc., to be and appear before Court of Star Chamber to answer for the premises.

Signed, Jo. Davys.

The whole is on one skin endorsed "Jovis nono [die] Decembris An° 45 Eliz.
Will^m^ Mill."

* Star Chamber Proceedings, Elizabeth, bundle 35 H, n. 13.

† Anthony Bartlett buried at Kelston 11 June 1637.

‡ Lady Rogers was buried at Kelston 22 Jan.; Sir John Harington buried 1 Dec. 1612.

§ The presence of boxes, etc., looks rather suspicious, both in reference to the motive Harington had in going to Cannington so promptly, and to the practical use he was making of his time there in Rogers' absence, and we are not altogether surprised that he sustained some ungentle usage.

GEORGE COLLINS OF HAM.

George Collins, Esq., second son of Gen. Arthur Tooker Collins, and grandson of Arthur Collins, author of the 'Peerage,' born 29 Oct. 1762, died 23 July 1826, having married Mary, only child of Samuel Pollexfen Trelawny, Esq., of Ham in the tything of Weston Peverell, near Plymouth; she died 4 Sep. 1837, aged 74. Mr. Collins succeeded to Ham, and left several children.

HARINGTON OF CORSTON IN THE COUNTY OF SOMERSET.

When Captain Harington died in 1700, Benjamin, a child of his third marriage, was his surviving son and heir. He was then about twenty-seven years of age, and had married and become a widower. In the year succeeding his father's death he contracted a second marriage. His first wife had been Elizabeth, daughter of William Lyde, Esq., of Knighton Sutton in the parish of Chew Magna (see 'Misc. Gen. et Her.,' Vol. III., N.S., p. 89). She had died issueless, after a very brief married life, in November 1693. In 1701 he remarried with Elizabeth, daughter and coheir of Zachary Baylie, a wealthy clothier of Westbury, Wilts. Whether he had made Corston his place of residence previously is uncertain; but by the time of his second marriage he had certainly made the Manor of Corston his property, and the Manor House there his settled home. It is to be observed that this Manor was not among the estates which had come to the Haringtons of Somerset under their most ancient grants (confirmed to them at various periods subsequently by the Crown), but was a property acquired by purchase in the time of John Harington "the Parliamentarian," who was grandfather to the Benjamin Harington of whom we are speaking. The descendants of Benjamin Harington and Elizabeth (Baylie) form the Corston line, which, at the present time (1882), is far more numerously represented than that of Kelston, descending from Captain Harington's fourth marriage with Helena Gostlett.

These remarks introductory to the genealogy of the Corston Haringtons must not be concluded without calling attention to the serious effect which Captain Harington's repeated marriages had on the fortunes of Harington of Somerset. Had Mary Specott, his first wife, lived a life of ordinary duration, the Haringtons would probably have been among the landed gentry of Somerset to this day. For had her only son John (who died in 1674) survived his father, he would have been the eldest heir-general of the Specotts, as well as heir of the Harington estates. A union of these properties would have sustained the representative of them in an important position in the western counties. But fate ruled it otherwise. Again, Captain Harington's second marriage gave him only a daughter, and then made him a widower. He married again, and again. So instead of a combination of estates, there came a dispersion eventually, and the year 1701 found the Haringtons of Somerset broken up into two houses, with divided property and interests. Their histories have continued quite independent of each other from that time, and no members of the one line have up to the present formed alliances with any of the other, nor come in contact in other associations. It is hardly necessary to remark that after the death of their common ancestor neither branch enjoyed much wealth; and both broke up from their respective seats in Somersetshire about the same time. The latter half of the eighteenth century (to speak approximatively) saw the estates of both branches pass to new owners—Corston Manor becoming the property of Joseph Langton, Esq., in whose representative it now continues; and Kelston passing to Cæsar Hawkins, Esq., Surgeon to Geo. III., afterwards created a Baronet. Sir John Cæsar Hawkins, Bart., sold it about fifty years ago to Joseph Neeld, Esq., of Grittleton House, Wilts.

Oxon, as to handwriting. Proved 25 May, 1728, by Jane Williams.

(Chancery Proceedings, Record Office, Mich. Term 1673-4. Bills and Answers, 1649-74.) Answer of William Hourd, gentleman, one of the Defendants to the Bill of Complaint of John Hoard and James Creech, gentlemen, Complainants. (8 May, 68, Michaelmas 73.) Said William Hoard is eldest brother of John Hoard, and near of kin to James Creech. Defendant seized of manor of East Membury [co. Devon] and other lands in the Bill mentioned, and is said to be of the clear yearly value of £250; mortgage of £500. Executor to John Hoard his father.

(Chancery Proceedings, Hoord v. Goodlake, 22 November, 1632, H. H., xliv., 57.) John Hoord, late of Burpham, Sussex, gentleman. William Hoord, said orator's father, was possessed and died about twenty-five years since and was executor.

* An old bookplate in the writer's possession, of which the copperplate seems to have been lost, gives the arms—1 and 4, Woollcombe; 2, Pitts; 3, Stokes, in chief a crescent for difference.

Personal estate came to Mary Hoord, second wife of said William Hoord, and orator's stepmother. 12 February, 1632-3: Answer of Thomas Goodlake, gentleman.

(Royalist Composition Papers, Second Series, Record Office, vol. xlvi., pp. 919-929.) JOHN HOORD of Burgham, co. Sussex, gentleman, son and heir of John Hoord, gentleman, deceased. His delinquency was that he was in arms against the Parliament; he had no estate till the death of his father, who died 2 April, 1650. Lease of Burpham parsonage for three lives, two of whom are dead. Petition states his father left him much in debt, and has his aged mother, two brothers and two sisters and their children, with his own wife and family to maintain out of an estate of £62 per annum.

(At Somerset House.) Administration to the effects of JOHN HOORD, late of Burpham, Sussex, deceased, granted 8 July, 1653, to William Hoord, natural and lawful son.

(Ibid.) Administration to the effects of JOHN HOORD, late of Burpham, deceased, was granted 25 July, 1653, to William Hoord and Charles Hoord his brothers. This was evidently an amended grant, as perhaps the son was a minor, and the deceased was the "Delinquent."

The following pedigree (chiefly from 'Sussex Archæological Collections,' xxv., 114), with additions kindly supplied by the late Col. Chester, it will be seen is calculated to elucidate the preceding, and to shew that the name was also spelt Hore; or the Ashfield family was connected with two distinct families of Hore and Hord, which is contrary to the probabilities of the case.

Sir Richard Ashfield (Courthope says John). Ob. 1635.

Wyborne) last will; wife Alice; lands to her for life, and then to sister Thomazine West for life, then to her son Thomas West. Proved 16 January, 1639–40. The testator was probably John, one of the children of Adam Ashburnham of Broomham, who died June 5, 1593, æt. 40, and was buried at Guestling; his other children being Lawrence (ancestor of the Baronets), Edward, Elizabeth, Roger, and Charles. HOARD OR HOWARD OF EWELL AND GUILFORD, CO. SURREY.

In the 'Topographer' (ii., 515) are some additional particulars of the family of Hord of Cote, and the descent of the manor of Bampton ; and reference is made to Dr. Giles' 'History of the Manor and Parish of Bampton,' 8vo, 1849, and to some interesting accounts of Sir Thomas Hord, Knt., in the 'Gentleman's Magazine' for Dec. 1849. Moreover the present writer, in reference to his original article, received a letter from the late C. E. Long, Esq., dated Feb. 25, 1851, stating that he made notes of several shields of arms in stained glass, which Mr. Hippisley of Lambourne Place, co. Berks, the then owner of Cote, had removed to his own residence ; that Miss Caroline Horde, who died 1836, devised Cote to Mr. Hippisley's father, and that she was granddaughter of Thomas Hord who married Anne Atkyns, grandson or great-grandson of Tho. Hord by Barbara Frinder. She was mother of Barbara Hord, wife of . . . . Palmer, who died 7 Jan. 1681, æt. 27, (apparently) father of Giles Palmer, who took the name of Hord, and in deeds 1728-32 is described as of Compton Scorpin, co. Warw. Thomas Horde was of Coate 1748, afterwards of Lower Swell, co. Gloucester, 1773.

† The bride was probably one of the daughters of Sir Wm. Bowyer, of Denham. Francis Bowyer, uncle of Sir Wm. Bowyer, married "Ann Howard, of Surrey," which may be a misnomer for Hoard. This Wm. Hoard, clerk, may be inferred to belong to the Hoards of Ewell, as there are intermarriages which warrant such an affiliation. The sister (Alice) of his bride married Wm. Buggins, of North Cray, Esq. Wm. Buggins, of St. John Street, London, his father, married Mary, daughter and heiress of Richard Millett, of Denham, and we have seen there was a match between Hord of Ewell and Millett.

DESCRIPTION OF FIFTEEN MONUMENTS WHICH WERE IN THE BROADWAY CHAPEL (NOW CALLED CHRIST CHURCH) AT WESTMINSTER, BEFORE RESTORATION. TAKEN BY HENRY POOLE, OF 11 GREAT SMITH STREET, 16 AUGUST 1843.*

1. Mural tablet, surmounted by bust, and with shield of arms beneath, to "Carolus Jervasius, Pictor Regius, Anno 1739, ætat. lxx." Height $10\frac{1}{2}$ feet, width 5 feet 3 inches, greatest projection 2 feet; weight $1\frac{1}{2}$ tons.

2. Mural tablet, with medallion portrait, to "Mrs. Elizabeth Squire." No date; in construction apparently between thirty and forty years old. Height 9 feet by 5 feet, greatest projection 1 foot 4 inches; weight above 1 ton.

These two monuments above were placed on each side of the Chancel.

3. "Joseph Waring of the Parish, Brewer, 1775." 3 feet 9 inches by 3 feet.

This monument was placed on the outside of the principal entrance, and was set in a plain frame of brick-red cement. It appears to be the remains of a complete decorated design.

7. "William Walter Giffard, 4th May 1801, aged xviii."

This monument was erected by his schoolfellows of Saint Paul's, of which (old school) stands a bas-relief representation at the top; and a gentleman has several times lately inquired about this monument. 5 feet by 3 feet.

8. "Three daughters of Hugh and Catherine Squier." "20th May 1674, Hugh Squier." There is apparently also an inscription to a son William, 20th May 1677. 8 feet 6 inches by 5 feet.

9. "Captn. William Taylor, died 27th May 1735, aged xcvi." The inscription included list of his many benefactions. 7 feet 6 inches by 5 feet 6 inches.

"William Bushel, 1697." 3 feet 3 inches by 2 feet 10 inches.

"Anne Sidwell, 1726." 2 feet 6 inches by 2 feet.

"Charles Dixon, 1795." 2 feet 10 inches by 1 foot 9 inches.

Armorial Bookplate.

THOMAS CHARLTON CLUTTON.

Thomas Charlton Clutton of Chorlton Hall, co. Chester, Esq., for whom this bookplate was engraved, was Lord of the Manor of Chorlton, a Magistrate and Deputy-Lieutenant for the counties of Cheshire and Shropshire, and sometime Captain in the Cheshire Militia. Mr. Clutton died without issue in 1863, and at his death the estate of Chorlton passed out of his family, although several of the younger branches are still represented.

The Cluttons were seated at Clutton, co. Chester, as early as the reign of Henry III., and removed to Chorlton, which they obtained by marriage, in the reign of Henry VIII. See Ormerod's 'History of Cheshire,' Burke's 'Heraldic Illustrations,' Shirley's 'Noble and Gentle Men of England,' etc., etc.

BOWKER OR BOOKER.—Any notes of this name, however spelt, from parish and diocesan registers, monumental inscriptions, wills, private deeds, manorial rolls, unindexed rolls in Record Office, Municipal and University records, pedigrees printed or MS., and books, especially those privately printed, thankfully received. Reference to MSS. or standard topographical works, or to living persons of the name, also requested.

WYMONDSOLD, GOULD, AND CLARGES FAMILIES.

Sir Robert Wymondsold of Putney died 28 July 1687, aged 23, eldest son of Sir Dawes Wymondsold, also of Putney, by Jane, only daughter of Sir Robert Cooke of Highnam, co. Gloucester. Sir Robert Wymondsold is stated to have married Elizabeth, daughter and coheiress of Sir Thomas Gould, and she married secondly, as his third wife, Sir Walter Clarges, Bart. (This Baronetcy created 30 Oct. 1674, extinct 17 Feb. 1834.) Sir Walter Clarges, Bart., married first Jane, daughter of above Sir Dawes Wymondsold, and sister of above Sir Robert Wymondsold. Sir Walter Clarges, Bart., married secondly Jane, daughter of Hon. James Herbert of Kingsey, co. Bucks. Sir Dawes Wymondsold's (an eminent Royalist) will was proved 22 Feb. 1674-5, by his relict Jane, who married secondly, as his third wife, Thomas Frewen of Northiam, Sussex (see Burke's 'Landed Gentry,' Frewen of Brickwall, Sussex). Sir Robert Wymondsold's will was proved 7 Sept. 1687 by Sir Walter Clarges, Bart., and Thomas Frewen. A Matthew Wymondsold of Wanstead died 24 August 1757, aged 80. A Charles Wymondsold of Lockinge, co. Berks, died 23 August 1776, and his widow Sarah married secondly John Pollexfen Bastard, M.P. for co. Devon, who thus acquired the Wymondsold estates, and died 4 April 1816, as did his wife 26 April 1808. Charles Wymondsold married as his first wife . . . . daughter of Robert Knight of Barrels, who was created Lord Luxborough in the kingdom of Ireland, M.P. for Castle Rising in Norfolk, and afterwards advanced to the dignity of Earl of Catherlogh. I shall be much obliged for any genealogical information as to the family of Wymondsold, and full particulars as to the issue of Sir Walter Clarges, Bart., beyond what is given in Burke's 'Extinct Baronetage.' I am aware of the pedigree of Cooke of Highnam in Atkyns's 'History of Gloucestershire,' and of Wymondsold in 'Visitation of Co. Notts 1614,' and in 'Le Neve's Knights' (both printed by the Harleian Society), and also in Thoroton's 'History of Nottinghamshire.'

DUKE.—Any notes concerning this family will be gratefully received, especially as to the parentage of Michael Duke of Lake, in the sixteenth century, and of Robert and George Duke, taken prisoners at S. Molton in 1655.

CAPT. PETER HOGG OF VIRGINIA, A RELATIVE OF THE ETTRICK SHEPHERD.—I am preparing for publication, by the Virginia Historical Society, the Records of the Administration of Robert Dinwiddie, Lieut.-Governor of the Colony of Virginia, 1752–1757. Among the worthies who figure therein is Captain Peter Hogg, Commander of a Company from Augusta County, Va., in the French and Indian War; was a personal friend of George Washington, subsequently became a man of wealth and influence; was a lawyer of prominence, and was commissioned by Lord Dunmore as Deputy Attorney-General for the County of Augusta His descendants are among the best esteemed people of Virginia.

He was a native of Scotland (emigrating thence in the early part of the eighteenth century), and by tradition, as I am informed by the Hon. Alexander H. H. Stuart, Staunton, Va., "a near relative of James Hogg, the Ettrick Shepherd." I shall hold myself singularly obliged by any information confirmatory of this tradition.

Corresponding Secretary and Librarian of the Virginia Historical Society.

1830. Jan. 17. Emily Georgina, daughter of Henry and Harriett Amelia Dickson Potterson, Captain 81st Regiment.

WILLIAMS, BROOKE, AND STARKEY FAMILIES.

On the 14th June, 1671, a licence was granted at Chester to John Maddock, to marry Frances Williams of Hampton Wood, co. Chester, widow. The will of Mrs. Frances Maddock is dated 23rd Oct., 1684, and was proved at Chester 23rd Sept., 1686. In her will she leaves legacies to her cousins, Pusey Brooke, Ann Brooke his wife, Christian Starkey, Henry Brooke and his wife, Goulborne, Bruen, Massey, Elcocke, Mary Bouroughs, Dorothy Legh, Oldfield, Phillis Starkey, Dorothy Fairfax, Thomas Starkey, Thomas Gambell, Moulston; nieces Jaques, Dorothy Fairfax, Anne Jaques the younger, Christian Starkey, Nancy Jaques; nephews Philip Starkey and Thomas Starkey; husband Williams; nephew Charles Mathews, and his mother Ann Mathews; Lord Chandos, Lord Bridgwater, Lady Brackley, and several members of the Maddock family. She speaks of several articles bearing the Starkey crest, and of her first husband Williams' Bible, "which was cutt and slashed by souldiers." I should much like to discover the parentage of this lady, and also to learn who her first husband Williams was. The Starkey and Brooke pedigrees, as given by Ormerod, shew a connection between the two families, and give most of the names mentioned in the will, but do not shew that any member of either family married first a Williams and then a Maddock.

Wardell of Durham.

I am also anxious to trace the parentage and history of a John Wardell who owned an estate in Durham, and had three sons: John Wardell of Liverpool, M.D., who married, in 1781, Elizabeth, daughter of Charles Filkin, and died in 1817; Robert Wardell, barrister-at-law; and George Wardell of Alnwick, M.D.

Junior Carlton Club. John Hamerton Crump.

Thomas Purchas.—Was Thomas Purchas, who settled on the coast of Maine, U.S., before 1630, and to whom a grant was made by the Plymouth Council of land between the Kennebec and Androscoggin rivers and Casco Bay, a relative to Samuel Purchas, the author of the 'Pilgrimages'?

George Cleve or Clevees.—He was probably from Plymouth, and appeared on the coast of Maine in 1630. He had a grant from the Council of Plymouth of the territory upon which the City of Portland, in the State of Maine, now stands. Can any information relative to his family, date of birth or marriage, or indeed anything respecting him previous to his leaving England, be given?

Portland, Maine, U.S. James P. Baxter.

NOTITIA.

Garvey of Murrisk, etc.

The descent of O'Garvey of Murrisk is traced by the Irish annalists to pre-Christian times. A pedigree commencing with Gairbhe, Prince of Murrisk, was entered in Ulster's Office temp. Sir Wm. Betham, and according to it the descents to John Garvey, father of the Primate, are as follow, viz., Gairbhe or Garvey, Prince of Murrisk; his son Fintan mar. Elizabeth, da. of Miles Cogan, Lord of Gralynge, co. Mayo; his son Thomas mar. Sabina, da. of Simon de Waleys or Walsh, of co. Mayo; his son Denis mar. Gormolina, da. of Patrick Dowdall of Ardmas, co. Mayo; his son John mar. Finola le Boteller of the House of Ormonde. A shorter pedigree was registered, 25 June 1832, for the late William Garvey of Xerez de la Frontera.

Primate Garvey was a considerable personage temp. Elizabeth. Educated at Oxford, upon his return to Ireland he was (on the 14th July 1559) presented to the archdeaconry of Meath and rectory of St. Columb, Kells, and from that time to his death in 1594 he constantly assisted in the government of the country, whether at the Privy Council Board or on numerous High Commissions, being "English-hearted," as Lord-Deputy Fitzwilliam expresses in a letter to the Queen and English Council (1 Oct. 1572). His services, however, were not without due meed of reward, such as the deanery of Christ Church in 1565, chaplaincy to the Earl of Sussex in 1567, bishopric of Kilmore (with liberty to retain the previous appointments) in 1585, and the primacy in 1589. Wood says that "he left behind him a little thing of his writing, entitled 'The Conversion of Philip Corwine, a Franciscan Friar, to the reformation of the Protestant Religion, anno 1589.'" It was published in 1681. ('Athenæ Oxoniensis,' vol. i., p. 715; Harris's 'Ware,' vol. i., p. 96.)

Robert Garvey, A.M., LL.B., a younger brother of the Primate, was also educated at Oxford. He is frequently named in the State Papers and other public records as a commissioner for ecclesiastical purposes, etc.; in 1578 he had licence to repair to England for one year, and in the next year was appointed a Master in Chancery in succession to James Stanyhurst, but died 2nd April following, his successor being John Ball, A.M., LL.B. Speaking of Nicholas Comerford, Wood remarks, "To him I now add his great friend and countryman, Rob. Garvey of the diocese of Kilkenny, who was elected Fellow of Oriel Coll., 1563, proceeded Master of Arts three years after, and became noted for his skill in both the Laws, and for a volubility in the English and Latin tongues, as my author, an Irishman, tells me, but whether he published anything I know not, nor anything else of him, only that he died in Ireland about 1579." ('Athenæ Oxon.,' vol. i., p. 201.) A letter from Archbp. Loftus to Lord Burghley, written 18 April 1580, supplies the exact date of death, viz., 2 April in that year. His kinsman Nicholas Garvey of Kilkenny mar. Katherine, eldest da. of Rich. Shee of Kilkenny, and aunt to Sir Rich. Shee, founder of Shee's Hospital in 1582, and to Elias Shee, ancestor of Sir George Shee, Bart., Under-Secretary of State in England.

Sir Christopher Garvey had, with a son Francis (grandfather of Col. John Garvey, M.P., an adherent of James II.), a da. who was married at the Court of Spain to Charles, last Prince of the O'Malleys (and grand-nephew to the celebrated Grana Uile), who died in exile at St. Germaines in 1692; she had been a maid of honour to the Queen. The Garveys experienced the vicissitudes of the civil disturbances temp. Cromwell and William III.

Dudley Garvey of Aughnagon, eldest brother of John Garvey of Castle Annagh, left a son Thomas Garvey of Aughnagon, who had, inter alia, James Garvey of Aughnagon, who obtained a confirmation of the family arms in 1760, and Robert Garvey, who settled at Rouen and married Mary, da. of Wm. Plowden of Plowden, by his wife Fanny, da. of Charles, fifth Lord Dormer, and left issue, Peter Garvey and Christopher Garvey.

Patrick Garvey of Castle Annagh (eldest son of John Garvey of Castle Annagh and his wife Ellen Shortall) had, by his wife Mary Power, four sons, viz., Thomas, William, Richard, and John.

Shortall.

"Ortelius's Map correctly locates this family in the barony of Iverk, county Kilkenny, where many of their castles are still standing, as at Claragh . . . . . Kilbline, Tubrid, Cloghmantagh, etc." (D'Alton's 'Army List of James II.,' vol. ii., p. 572.) "They threw out some important branches . . . . . but the lord of Ballylorcan was always acknowledged as the head of the House." (Graves and Prim's 'History of St. Canice, Kilkenny,' p. 168.) Robert Scorthals, suggested, in the 'History of St. Canice's Cathedral,' to have been of Flemish origin, was grantee in fee of Ballylorcan, ante 1218. Graves and Prim give the following descents—Sir Robert Schortals, died 1322; Sir Geoffrey Schortals was knighted in 1336 by James le Boteller, first Earl of Ormonde and Lord of the Palatinate of Tipperary; his son Sir Robert Schortals appointed Sheriff of Kilkenny in 1421; his son Robert Schortals; his son James Schorthals, born 1421, mar. Katherine Whyte, and erected his own tomb in St. Canice Cathedral in 1507, an engraving of which tomb (an altar one surmounted by his effigy in a sheet of chain-mail, etc.) is given in the 'Hist. of St. Canice Cathedral;' his son James Shortall mar. Owney Fitzpatrick, and was father of Sir Oliver Shortall of Ballylorcan, knighted 22 Feb. 1614, and died 9 Aug. 1630.

He mar. Joan, da. of John Butler of Kilcash, and sister to Walter, Earl of Ormonde; his son James mar. his cousin Joan Shortall, and died 1635; his son Thomas mar. Mary, da. of Sir Richard Everard, Kt.; his son Col. Thomas Shortall mar. Anne, da. of Bennett of Marlfield, co. Tipperary, and was father of Ellen Shortall, wife of John Garvey of Castle Annagh. The Ballylorcan estate, which became forfeited by the Shortalls, was granted to Sir Geo. Ayscue, Kt. (Grants under Acts of Settlement, etc.) Arms of Shortall: Gules, a cross arg., thereon four lions' heads erased of the first.

Blennerhassett.

Thomas Blennerhassett of Flimby, co. Cumberland, was grantee from Sir Edw. Denny, lord of the Seignory, of Ballycham and Ballycarty, co. Kerry, and Robert Blennerhassett his son was also grantee in the Seignory of Ballyshiddy (Ballyseedy) Castle, etc.; and in 1666 a Crown grant was made to the Blennerhassetts of 2000 acres in co. Cork and 2787 acres in co. Kerry. The principal Kerry branches are those of Ballyseedy, Castleconway (estates alienated), and Blennerville, Baronets.

In the will of Thos. Blennerhassett of Litter his daughters Martha and Honor are not named, but 'Black Jack's MS.' gives them—the first as eldest daughter, and wife of (1) Fredk. Mullins, (2) Henry Parr; and the second as wife of Jos. Morris.

Captain John Blennerhassett of Castleconway was the author of "the curious collection of pedigrees known to Munster genealogists as 'Black Jack's Book.'" ('Jour. Royal Hist. and Arch. Association, Irc.,' 4th series, vol. iv., p. 31.) Miss Hickson's 'Kerry Records,' pub. 1872, contain an account of "Black Jack," and give at length his MS. pedigree of the Blennerhassett family, written ante 1736, and which concludes with the distich—

"Show me the country, place, or spot of ground,
Where 'Hassetts or their allies are not to be found!"

The author of the 'Kerry Records' remarks that "the dates of his birth, marriage, and death cannot be obtained owing to the state of the parish registers," which are certainly, it is to be deplored, in a very defective state throughout Ireland.

His brother Thomas Blennerhassett was ancestor, through his daughter Jane, of the celebrated Daniel O'Connell.

Edw. Blennerhassett of Rosbeagh had, besides his eldest son the Rev. John Blennerhassett, two others, viz., Robert and Conway. Conway, who was born in 1736, took Holy Orders, became Rector of Ardfert, and died s.p. in 1805, constituting as his heir his nephew, Captain Thomas Blennerhassett, eldest son of his then deceased brother, Rev. John Blennerhassett.

Captain Thomas Blennerhassett had younger brothers, viz.—John, who left an only son, Aldworth Blennerhassett, Capt. 73rd Foot, and an only da. who mar. General Thomas Gordon Higgins; and Conway and Goddard, who both died s.p. His sisters were Elizabeth, wife of Edw. Fuller of Cork; Louisa, Catherine, and Letitia (the last two being twins). His full issue was as follows, viz., (1) John, bap. 10 June 1792; (2) Henry (named in the will of his maternal grandmother, Mrs. Mary Blennerhassett alias Poujade, 1802); (3) Goddard; (4) Conway; and (5) Arthur—all of whom died sine prole; (6) Louisa, bap. 4 July 1794, wife of Mr. Wade; (7) Eliza (named in her maternal grandmother's will 1802), wife of Mr. Garvey; (8) Charlotte, bap. 7 and buried 18 October 1801; (9) Charlotte, bap. 30 June 1803, died unmarried; and (10) Letitia, wife of Doctor William Bruce.

Mary Blennerhassett, wife of Captain Tho. Blennerhassett, had, with two sisters, Jane (Mrs. Armstrong) and Charlotte (Mrs. Rowland Eager), a younger brother, Edw. Francis, who died unmar., and an elder brother, John Henry Blennerhassett, who mar. Elizabeth, da. of John O'Connell, Esq., by whom he had issue Henry, Catherine, and Mary, who died unmar., and Anne, wife of Rowland Tallis Eager, Esq. He mar. secondly Veronica Montgomerie (who died in Tralee 15 Aug. 1841, and was buried in Ballyseedy), by whom he had five daughters, viz., Veronica, who mar., 15 Sept. 1840, J. G. P. FAMILY OF CARR.—A valuable miniature was bought not long ago in Switzerland—it was that of a Moses D. Carr, Captain 57th Regiment. He seems to have joined about 1795, and retired on half pay in 1809; disappears from the List in 1811. The purchaser wished to discover Captain Moses D. Carr's family, and those acquainted with the best known families of Carr can not identify him. Was he any relation of Richard Corban Carr of Dublin in the last century?

NOTES TO THE FOREGOING PEDIGREE.

[1] Lord Chamberlain to King Edward VI. By patent, dated 28 May 33 Hen. VIII., Lord Wentworth had special livery of all the lands which descended to his wife on the death of her mother, whereby he became possessed of the manors of Bradston, Stinchcombe, etc., in Gloucestershire, whilst the records relating to them were retained by the Crown. ('Genealogist,' vol. ii., p. 41.)

[2] Died in the Tower of London, and was buried with great pomp in a chapel in the parish church of Minster, co. Kent, 1558.

[3] Anne Broughton, who married Sir Thomas Cheney, was the da. of Sir John Broughton, Kt., by his wife Anna, da. and h. of Sir Guy Sapcote, Kt. The Broughton family inherited the Toddington estate by the marriage of John Broughton, great-grandfather of Sir John, with Mary, da. and heir of Thomas Peyvre and of Margaret his wife, da. and coh. of Sir Niel Loring, Kt., of Chalgrave, a neighbouring parish. The estate had been in the Peyvre family since the reign of Hen. III., when Paulinus had the manor. This Paulinus is supposed to have been descended from Roger Pauper, Bishop of Salisbury and Chancellor of England, who died 4 Dec. 1139. According to some authorities Mary Peyvre had for her first husband Sir Richard St. Maur, jun., Kt., s. and h. of Richard, Lord St. Maur, and by him had an only child Alice, who married William Zouche, fifth Baron Zouche of Harringworth. She died in the lifetime of her father (Esc. 8 H. VI.) Thomas Peyvre, who died 22 Sept. 1429, and his will, which was dated 4 Nov. 1426, was proved at Lambeth 3 Nov. 1429, and administration granted to John Broughton and others.

[4] At her death the Toddington estate passed to her great-nephew Thomas Wentworth, Earl of Cleveland.

[5] Cf. 'Visit. of Essex,' Harl. Soc., vol. ii., p. 558, s.v. Cock.

[6] Collins states that Henry, 3rd Baron Wentworth, died of the plague at Sir James Harrington's at Exton. (Harl. MS. 1177.)

[7] See 'Visitation of Essex,' Harl. Soc., vol. i., p. 316. Burke and Collins both call her wrongly Catherine.

[8] I am doubtful as to this connection. After a lengthy correspondence with the late Colonel Chester, I am still unable to identify this Thomas, and to say whose son he was. The only proof that I have been able to obtain that there was such a person is the inscription from the coffin-plate (Mis. Gen., Vol. III., p. 450). There is no entry in the registers to shew that such a person ever existed.

[9] Charles, s. of Thomas, 4th Baron Wentworth, was baptized at St. Mary Aldermanbury, London, 15 July 1621.

[10] On his death in 1791, all his estates in Northants, Beds, Suffolk, Kent, Surrey, Middlesex, and the City of London, were vested in the heirs of his three sisters as tenants-in-common, and by Act of Parliament were divided amongst them in 1795.

[11] Speaker of the Irish House of Commons. Born 1669.

[12] His executors sold the Toddington estate in 1806 to John Cooper, Esq., whose descendants still hold it.

Note.—In the 'Visitation of Essex,' Harl. Soc., vol. i., p. 314, at foot, Mary, eld. da. & coh. of S[r] John Wentworth, and Ann, da. to .... Bettenham of Bickley (? Pluckley), is there said to have married Thomas, Lord Wentworth of Nettlested. I am unable to identify this marriage. There appear to have been so many intermarriages in this family that it is exceedingly difficult to unravel the intricacies of this pedigree, and all the printed authorities I have consulted seem to be anything but clear as to its branches.

COLT FAMILY.—In Lawrence-Archer's 'Monumental Inscriptions of the British West Indies,' he records one (p. 312) at St. John's, Jamaica, of "Hester," widow of R[d] Baltropp of Gray's Inn Estate, "daugh. of Sir John Colte, Knight," obiit 3[d] Oct. 1679, ætatis suæ 58 ; and p. 297, at St. Thomas, Old Church, Morant Bay, one of "Anne Freeman, who was wife to y[e] Hon. Collonell Thomas Freeman of Bellveder, daughter to Richard Bellthropp, Esq., and granddaughter to Sir John Colt." "She departed this life August y[e] 3[d], 1681, ætatis suæ 30." Can any one give any particulars of this Sir John Colt, who must have been brother of Sir Harry Dutton Colt, the first Baronet? Had any of these Colts connections with the West Indies or the American Colonies? A Rebecca Ann Colt, born about 1747, was in Georgia when young ; family tradition connected her with an Irish Bishop or Dignitary, perhaps only maternally. The double Christian name (at that period not common) might give some clue. The name of Colt does not occur among the settlers mentioned in the Georgia Historical Collections, nor does it appear among the Irish Bishops.

† The above is undoubtedly the record of baptism of Richard Kinge of Sherborne, in the county of Dorset, Esq., Counsellor-at-law, Justice of the Peace, etc., to whom arms were granted in 1641 (ante, p. 264). In the Records of the Inner Temple, under date of November 1611, he is described as: "Ricardus Kynge, de Castle Carye, Co. Somerset, gen." His sureties were Thomas Petre and Thomas Duncombe. He was called to the Bar in 1620, and to the Bench in 1638. He was also M.P. for Weymouth in the reign of Charles I. He was probably that Richard King who married Edith, daughter of Robert Seymer of Hanford, Dorset. Knight (Hutchins' 'Dorset,' vol. iv., p. 66). In the Sherborne Register (ante, pp. 265-6) we find the following entries of burial:—

Captain John Harington, who died in 1700, was the common ancestor of both the Corston and Kelston families. The descent of Harington of Corston from 1700 has been already shewn. We come now to deal with that of Harington of Kelston from the same date and on the same method. Several tabular pedigrees will be given; but we wish to preface these with a few explanatory remarks, so introducing the reader, as we hope more clearly, to the knowledge of the position and circumstances of this line of Harington at the date we resume its history, viz., in 1700 A.D.

The Haringtons of Kelston from 1700 were the issue of Captain John Harington by Helena his fourth wife, eldest daughter of Benjamin Gostlett, Esq., of Marshfield, co. Gloucester. Besides several daughters (of whom the pedigree will suffice to tell the tale) six sons were born of this marriage, viz., John, Gostlett, Henry, William, Robert, and Edward, of these, John, the eldest, succeeded to the Kelston estate so soon as he attained his age, which happened shortly after his father's decease. He married Dorothy, daughter of William White, Esq., of Little Somerford, co. Wilts, but died childless 1725, and his widow, Dorothy, followed him to the grave in the succeeding year. Henry, the third brother, became John's successor, for Gostlett, the intermediate brother, died unmarried in the lifetime of John. Having but recently finished his career at the University of Oxford, he died in November 1706. The Henry Harington, who now comes before us, 1726, united in one ownership (as John his brother had done after the death of Gostlett) both the Marshfield and Kelston estates. Gostlett Harington had enjoyed a brief tenure of the Gloucestershire property only. What the income of the Marshfield manor was in 1726 we know not, but legal documents shew that it was sold in 1730 to Sir William Codrington, Bart., to defray debts.

The Kelston estate became encumbered also between 1730 and 1743 to the extent of £8000, to one Joseph Nicholls of the "Six Clerks' Office." This debt was caused to a great extent through the legacies and marriage portions charged on the estate in favour of Henry's younger brothers and sisters respectively. It may be well here to remind the reader that the Kelston and Marshfield manors were now the only ones remaining to Harington of Kelston in 1726; for St. Catherine's Court, in Bath Easton, and Nyland, near Glastonbury, two manors which had come to the Haringtons from the King (Henry VIII.) through his confidantes the Maltes, had been sold during Sir John Harington's lifetime, except a reserved "Chief Rent" issuing from the former. It is probable that these manors were disposed of to defray the great outlay the knight had made in completing and adorning the grand mansion called "Kelston House." This had been begun in his father's lifetime, but not completed. Occasion would also arise to Sir John for considerable sums of money in carrying on his various suits at law. Both when he made the attempt to recover the ancient manors belonging to Sir James Harington of Brierlay, and when he litigated with his wife's family, the Rogers of Cannington, by proceeding in the Star Chamber. Again, the manorial estate of Corston, which the frugality of John Harington, Esq., the Parliamentarian, had added to the family resources, was, in 1693, diverted to the use of that branch of Harington whose history we have recently concluded. The estates in Devon and Cornwall, pertaining to the Specotts, were entirely lost to the Haringtons by the premature decease of the only male Harington issuing from Captain Harington's match with Mary Specott. Lastly, any properties of the Rogers family, which the Parliamentarian Harington had enjoyed from his mother's side, had gone to George Harington, and passed down his line, i.e., the Haringtons of Worden, in Shebbear, co. Devon. Looking then in whatever direction we may, it has become quite apparent to us that the resources of the Kelston family had become seriously reduced in 1726. However, for a few years after his entry on Kelston and Marshfield, Henry Harington, Esq., kept up his position and exercised his rights as lord of those manors, to grant leases for lives. He was a married man, and his eldest son, John, had been born already some ten years, when he came to reside at Kelston. In short, it would seem as if all his children except Henry (afterwards Dr. Harington of Bath) were born away from Kelston. The Kelston Parish Register only records the baptism of Henry in 1727. His wife was Mary, daughter of Henry Backwell or Bakewell of Northants, Esq. Now, from this union and through Henry (Dr. Harington), their only son, who survived after 1751, both the late Chancellor of Exeter Cathedral, and all existing Haringtons of the Kelston stock derive their origin. Not that the younger brothers of Henry, sen., died either unmarried or childless, but a close study of Harington genealogy proves that the issue from all of these died out before the elder Henry brought his career to a close in 1769.

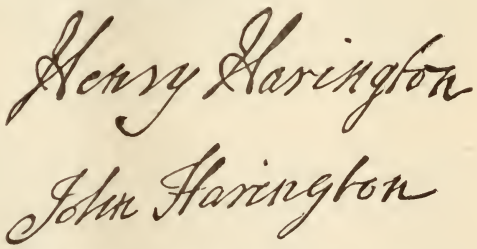
The children of Henry Harington, Esq., and Mary Backwell were, John, Henry, Dionesse, Dorothy, and Helena. John, the son and heir born about 1717, died in the lifetime of his father (1751) without issue, but not before he had been a party to barring the entail of Kelston Manor and creating an estate in fee simple for his father. Of Henry, the sole surviving son in 1769, as he became a man of note in literature and music, we propose hereafter to give a brief biographical sketch. Suffice it to say here, in closing this preface, that Henry, the elder, was the last Harington who occupied the great House at Kelston, and we give the signatures of him and of the eldest son who joined in cutting off the entail.



He clung to his ancestral property down to 1759, but at that date he could no longer support his position, so, availing himself of his power to sell, he suffered a fine and recovery which conveyed the last Harington estate to Cæsar Hawkins, Esq. After this he retired to Bath, where he survived the sale of his property ten years, and outlived all his relatives except his own children. At the ripe age of eighty-three, he was brought to Kelston to be buried, and rests there in the churchyard among his ancestors; the date of his interment being 28 May 1769.

The tabular pedigrees to follow will, we trust, be found adequate in themselves to illustrate the descent and alliances of the family to the present day.

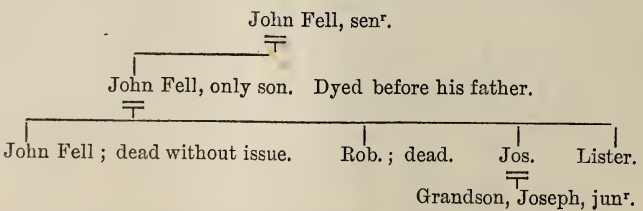
FELL.—[Vide Vol. III., p. 231.] Robert Fell, Esq., of the City of London, while residing at Clifton in Gloucestershire, makes his will, April 28, 1755. Has lands at Wapping, Kent, and Essex ; mentions his brothers Joseph and Lister Fell, his kinsman John Perkins of the City of London, grocer ; also four children known by the name of Bradshaw, who are entitled to legacies under his father's will. In a codicil, dated 3 May 1755, mentions John, a son of Joseph Fell, his brother, already born. On the back of this will some one has sketched the following pedigree :—



In a lease, for a year to Robert Tudman of the Middle Temple, of the manor or reputed manor of the rectory of Walthamstow in Essex, and other lands, April 24, 1755, Rob. Fell of City of London, Esq., is described as the eldest surviving son of John Fell, the younger, of St. John's, Wapping, and brother and heir of the late John Fell of the said parish, merchant ; he signs and seals with the following arms : Argent, a chevron sable, between three birds with wings addorsed, a crescent for difference. A bargain and sale of Brome or Brewhouse farm for £1830 in the parish of Henham Elsingham (Henham and Elsenham ?), in Essex, from the trustees of the South Sea Company to John ffell, jun^r^, of St. John, Wapping, merchant, and Joseph Crowcher of the same place, vintner, dated April 22, 1729, signed and sealed with a crest, a greyhound's head erased.

Any information concerning the above family of Fell will be welcomed by me.

* "Professor François Marcet, who died a few days ago in London at an advanced age, though English by birth, was a Swiss by adoption and family connection, and spent the greater part of his long life in this canton [Geneva]. He had been a member of its Legislature and its Government, and, until the day of his death, was an honorary professor of its university. Marcet's achievements in the realm of science were numerous and noteworthy, and procured for him the membership of the Royal Society of England. Some of his discoveries, especially those concerning the boiling point of water, the determination, by freezing, of the specific heat of solids, and, above all, his observations at Pregny, in this neighbourhood, on the increase of temperature of artesian wells, have played an important part in the elaboration of some important cosmologic theories. Several of these observations were made in collaboration with his friend Auguste de la Rive. In conjunction with De Candolle he made a series of researches in vegetable physiology and the action of poison on plants, and his 'Manuel de Physique élémentaire,' albeit now out of date, ranked forty years ago as the best scientific text-book of the period. Besides being a savant, Marcet was also an ardent politician. He served on the patriot side in the Greek War of Independence. At the beginning of the struggle he was commissioned by the famous Genevan Philhellene Eynard to convey a large sum of money to the insurgents, a task of which he acquitted himself with equal courage and success. In 1866, when Crete rose against its Ottoman masters, he was unanimously elected president of a committee formed at Geneva to raise a fund for the relief of the Cretan refugees who had fled to Athens and the Piræus. Marcet was always a worker, and while in London did good service as a member of the management of University College."—Times, 17 April 1883.

* There is a Grace Harington buried at Kelston 15 Jan. 1765. But as her age is not stated in the Register, nor any clue given to her identity elsewhere, it seems impossible to assign her a place in the Pedigree with certainty; she may have been the child of Robert and Susannah, or of Dr. Harington of Bath by Martha Musgrave.

† This is probably the Mary Harington, widow, who, in July 1778, purchased the lucrative office in connection with the Baths of Bath styled "pumper." It cost her £650 in July of that year.

But his name is missing when the actual sale took place 1758-9. Family memoranda shew that he died s.p. 1751, but do not state his place of death or burial, nor does the Register of Kelston contain his name. See his signature, with his father's, given in preface to this Pedigree (page 367).

* It is thought that these Musgraves were of the Harcla Castle stock. Mrs. Sarah Musgrave, bur. at Kelston from Bath 28 May 1783, was doubtless a relation of Dr. Harington. The marriage at Swyncombe is given from family memoranda, for the Parish Register of that date is no longer extant.

† No evidence has come to hand which would shew the place of birth and baptism of the children of Henry and Mary, except of their son Henry, who was born and bapt. at Kelston.

‡ The surname of Sir Edward's first wife would be wholly unknown but for its occurrence in one only of the family pedigrees held by Capt. Harington, R.N.

§ There is a work dated 1793, nameless, but really written by Sir Edward Harington, Kt., entitled 'A Schizzo on the Genius of Man,' but it treats chiefly on the talent of one man, Mr. Thomas Barker, then a celebrated young painter of Bath.

Notes.

See a Pedigree of Jevon of Sedgley in Shaw's 'Staffordshire,' vol. ii., App. 19. The above Visitation Pedigree much enlarges it. The Arms of Jevon are engraved on Plot's map.

John Scott, Esq., of Great Barr, married Mary Jevon 29 May 1620; she was buried 11 March 1653.

Daniel Jevon, Esq., married Jane, second daughter of William Ward of Willingsworth, Sedgley, Esq. (he died Jan. 1713-4), second surviving son of Humble, first Lord Ward. (Collins's 'Peerage,' vol. vi., 277.)

Jane Jevon was fourth wife of Richard Bracegirdle of Wolverhampton, who died 1667.

Henry Jevon in April 1667, received money from Thomas Scott of Barr, for his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Jevon of London, who is called by said Thomas Scott his "cousin" Elizabeth Jevon.

Daniel Jevon was Mayor of Shrewsbury in 1672.

John Jevon had four children, Ambrose, Muschamp, Molly, and Kitty. Muschamp had a son Muschamp. Administration to the effects of Ambrose Jevon was granted in February 1768 to his sisters Molly and Kitty. (MS. Diary of Rev. Edward Best.)

Perhaps some correspondent can give additional information respecting the old Staffordshire family of Jevon.

Old Seal.—A curious old seal has been dug up by chance in this neighbourhood, near a ruined castle, and lands once owned by the Fitz Maurices, Lords Kerry—one of whom was made Viscount Kilmaule by Henry VIII. in 1536, with remainder to his sons; but the Viscount died in 1641, leaving only one child, a daughter, by his wife the daughter of Lord Zouche. The seal bears the Fitz Maurice crest as used by Lord Lansdowne, but the coat differs materially from that borne in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries by the Lords and Earls of Kerry. Their coat in Archdall's edition of Lodge's 'Peerage' for 1789, is a saltire ruby on pearl field with a chief ermine. The coat on the seal is a saltire ruby on an ermine field with the chief charged with three fleurs-de-lis. Over this is a Viscount's coronet, and the helmet and plumes, and the centaur crest; the supporters are also the same as those given in Lodge. Neither Sir Bernard Burke nor Mr. Graves, the editor of the 'Historical and Archæological Journal,' can account for the fleurs-de-lis on the coat on the seal. Can they have come through the Zouch marriage; that is, did the Zouche Lords or Knights bear fleurs-de-lis on their coat? Lodge and other genealogists assert that the presence of the chief ermine on the coat armour of the Fitz Maurice Earls of Kerry is an "unerring sign" that their ancestor William de Carew, as he is called, was the younger brother of Maurice Fitz Gerald, ancestor of the Duke of Leinster, instead of his elder, as Giraldus Cambrensis asserts. But from this seal it would appear that in very early times the Lords Kerry did not bear the chief ermine at all, but a chief charged with three fleurs-de-lis. The question arises, did they use this in their own right, or does the coat on the seal represent their coat and the Zouche one?

* There is a blank in the transcript here. Query if the omission is "son."

† Planché, in his 'Corner of Kent,' following Hasted, states that the Manor of Nevill's Fleet in Ash passed, a few years after the death of Charles I., by a female heir, Elizabeth Harflete, through her marriage to Thomas Kitchell, and recites that a marriage in 1652 took place at St. Mary Bredin, Canterbury, between Thomas Kitchell and Elizabeth Harflete. In a footnote, Planché states that he cannot trace this Elizabeth Harflete in any of the numerous pedigrees of the Harflete family. This is accounted for by the fact that the name of Thomas Kitchell's wife was Hanna, and not Elizabeth. In the Courthope collection at Heralds' College there is a short pedigree which states that Hannah, eldest daughter of John Harflete of Canterbury, gent., married Thomas Kitchell. Her marriage settlement was dated 7 January 1652. They had issue Thomas Kitchell, whose marriage settlement was dated 4 and 5 November 1689. He died January 1692. Will dated 1690.

INQUIRIES AS TO THE WODHULL OR WOODHULL FAMILY.

Thomas, second Lord Crewe of Stene, in 1687, wrote the following letter to Richard Wodhull or Woodhull, Esquire, of Setauket, Long Island, America. The letter is still in existence, and is in the possession of his descendants. (It is published in Thompson's 'History of Long Island,' vol. ii., page 399, and in Harvey's 'History of Willey Hundred, Bedfordshire,' Parish of Odell, Genealogy of the Family of Woodhull.)

"Sr,

"I was heartily glad to find by yr letter that it hath pleased God so to bless and prosper your family, and that you received the small present" [crest and arms of the family] "I sent you some time since wh. I thought had been lost. For our country news take this account. My father departed this life Dec. 12, 1679, and as he lived well, soe he had great joye at his death, with a longing to leave this world. I have six children, but noe sonne, it having pleased God to take him in ye 15 year of his age, a man grown and very hopeful. God's will be done. My brother Walgrave hath left one sonne, who stands heir to ye Bishop of Duresme (Durham) and myself for Thenford. Ye cozen Wodhull lives very well, is a justice of the peace, and very well beloved. The three brothers live all together with the greatest kindnesse that can be. My uncle Sal died last year and is buried at Hinton—my uncle Thomas a year before. My uncle Nathaniel is still living. I have enclosed the papers you desire. My service to all my cozens. I rest your loving friend and kinsman, (Signed) "Crewe.

"Stene, Sept. 5th, 1687."

Superscribed, "For my loving kinsman, Richard Wodhull, Esq."

This Richard Wodhull was the founder of the American branch of the Family of Wodhull or Woodhull. The date of his emigration to America is uncertain. He is believed to have come to Long Island, New York, in 1648, possibly so early as 1646. He was the chief patentee of Brookhaven (and founded Setauket, where he resided) in 1655. He was a magistrate, a representative of Brookhaven in the General Court of Connecticut, a commissioner to the Dutch Commander in New York, etc., etc. He signed himself Richard Wodhull, as is evidenced by public documents in the Colonial Archives at Albany, New York, by the Indian deed of session to himself of the land embraced in Brookhaven, and by other papers in existence.

According to the family record and tradition, Richard Wodhull or Woodhull was born at Thenford, Northamptonshire, England, September 13, 1620, and by an unauthenticated pedigree in the possession of the family, of date anterior to 1680, it appears that his father was Lawrence Wodhull, Esquire. His two sons were named respectively Richard and Nathaniel, the latter being a name much used in the Crewe family.

The Thenford branch of the family spelled the name Wodhull; the Mollington, Oxfordshire, branch of the family, Woodhull. Harvey spells the name Woodhull after the reign of Edward III. The panel above referred to, on which is painted the crest and arms of the family, is still in the possession of the family at the old Woodhull residence at Setauket, Long Island, on the estate purchased by Richard Woodhull in 1655 from the Indians, and owned by his descendants.

The object of this publication is to institute an inquiry as to the exact relationship which existed between Thomas, second Lord Crewe of Stene, and Richard Wodhull, Esquire, of Long Island, America.

Roger Chetwood [called "John" by Kimber] of Oakley, married Margery, daughter and heir of David Crewe of Pulcroft or Pulcroste, Co. Cester. And Thomas Wodhull, styled Baron Wodhull, married Elisa or Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John, and sister and heir of Sir Thomas Chetwode of Warkworth. But these marriages are thought to be too remote to have warranted the form of address adopted by Lord Crewe to Richard Wodhull in 1687. The relationship will probably be established through a Crewe, Bray, Chetwood, Woodhull intermarriage or inter-marriages. The papers of Thomas, second Lord Crewe of Stene, if still in existence, might furnish the evidence desired.

The letter of Lord Crewe is singularly exact as to family incidents, and indicates the existence of a friendship as well as a kinship between Richard Wodhull and the Crewe family.

John Wodhull of Thenford, Esquire, born July 22, 1641, buried August 13, 1707, who was in the Commission of the Peace, is believed to be "ye cozen Wodhull, a justice of the peace," of the Crewe letter, and the "three brothers" of the letter are believed to be this John and his brothers Fulk and Francis, both living at the time. In a letter to his son, written in 1757, and given in Beardsley's Life of the writer, Dr. Samuel Johnson, first President of King's College, New York, speaking of Richard Woodhull, says he "was an English gentleman of a considerable family, cousin-germaine by his mother to Lord Crewe, father to the late Bishop of Durham, whose niece was mother to the present Earl Waldegrave."

The undersigned, who is the head of the American branch of the Family of Wodhull or Woodhull, will be grateful for any assistance in solving this interesting genealogical question, and for satisfactory proof of the exact relationship existing between Thomas, second Lord Crewe of Stene, and Richard Wodhull, of Long Island, evidenced by proper and confirmatory references to records and dates, including that of the birth of the said Richard Wodhull or Woodhull, he begs to offer the sum of twenty guineas; or for a duly certified Parish Register Extract giving the date of birth or baptism of the said Richard Wodhull or Woodhull the sum of five guineas.

Maxwell Van Zandt Woodhull.

Sacred to the Memory of Henry Edward Schofield, only son of Thomas Schofield, Liverpool, who departed this life on the 6th day of November, A.D. 1817. In the 19th year of his age. The deceased was endowed by nature with Unassuming manners, With an amiable and tender disposition, Possessing a heart untainted by any mean or sordid propensity. He gave delight to his parents, And great satisfaction to his friends. His mind was adorn'd in no ordinary degree With Taste, judgment, genius and sensibility, unremitting in the pursuit of knowledge. The skill he acquired as a surgeon would have conducted him most honourably to the highest rank in his profession. As a Pupil of the Dispensary when the Typhus fever rag'd in Liverpool, to an extent, unusually alarming, he was selected for his talents to attend a multitude of patients labouring under that calamity. And whilst he assiduously devoted himself to preserve the unfortunate, Careless of his own safety,

He fell a Sacrifice to his Benevolence. A victim to the disease which ultimately subdued him. Whilst he lay struggling with the malady No murmur escap'd his lips, incompatible with Christian Resignation. His sigh was the sigh of peace, breathing forgiveness to all men, And his last concern on earth was to bless those he lov'd, Before the spark of life became extinct in his bosom. Thus, at a period most interesting Whilst the virtues of nonage brighten'd the hopes of manhood, He was, at the call of the Omnipotent, removed from his affectionate parents, leaving them in a state of mind too afflicted to be measur'd by common sympathy, or to be relieved by any other solace than Religion.

Possessed of an independent fortune, and a heart in unison with the dictates of the Christian dispensation, of which he was a sincere believer. For the rich his demands were moderate, for the poor, to whom his doors and purse were always open, the supreme delight of doing good was his only remuneration. In a word, this excellent man, at one and the same time the skilled physician administered medical aid, the generous friend afforded pecuniary assistance, and the pious Christian whispered peace to the souls of those whom he attended. Worn down at length with anxiety for the welfare of others, He closed his career of a life useful to the world and honourable to himself, on the 17th of August, 1792, in the 50th year of his age.
